Ford calls upon America to maintain military might

WASHINGTON (U P I) — President Ford paid homage to the nation's war dead on Memorial Day and warned Americans would risk their freedom unless they maintain the military might to deal with future international lawbreakers.

"Although we live in a rapidly changing world, some things remain the same," Ford said in noontime ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery.

"One is the need to maintain our military strength. For as long as there are lawbreakers in the world, we must have the strength and the resolve to stand up for what is right."

"It is the price we have always paid for being free. It is the price we must be willing to pay in the future."

A crowd, estimated at about 4,500 by cemetery officials, broke into applause at that point in the Ford's brief speech — delivered in an outdoor amphitheater immediately after the President had placed a wreath of red, white and blue flowers on the marble Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Ford made no specific mention of the Communist victories in South Vietnam and Cambodia, or of the crisis triggered by the Cambodian seizure of the unarmed U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez.

But the President said "the United States will not falter in its determination" to get an accounting of Americans still listed as "missing in action" long after U.S. withdrawal from the Vietnam war.

And, in an apparent reference to the 15 Americans killed in the Mayaguez rescue operation, he said: "Today we pay tribute not only to our war time dead, but to those who made the same sacrifice in keeping the peace. They have proven that the quality of heroism — of love of country and willingness to serve in time of troubles — beats just as strong in American hearts today as ever."

On the way to the ceremony, the President passed row after row of tombstones marking the graves of more than 165,000 U.S. servicemen who have been buried there after every war since the Revolution. Miniature American flags fluttered in front of the graves.

The President said he hoped the nation could enjoy the fruits of peace made possible by those who died in service to the country. "They will not have died in vain—and their loved ones will not have suffered in vain—if we vow to live our lives in the cause of honor, freedom, and justice that they so gallantly served," he said.

The morning was cold and gray but the weather cleared as the traditional ceremony of remembrance began.

Congress dormant on energy issue

Ford to raise oil import tariff

WASHINGTON (U P I) — President Ford will impose another $1 tariff on each barrel of imported crude oil June 1, a move that will push the price of a gallon of gasoline 1.5 cents higher, White House sources said Monday.

Ford will announce his decision at 8:30 p.m. EDT today in a 10-minute, broadcast speech to the nation from his White House office.

The White House said Ford was acting "in the absence of any congressional action" on the comprehensive energy conservation bill he sent to Capitol Hill five months ago.

Ford couldn't wait any longer, one aide said, because "Congress has done nothing."

The President imposed the first of three planned $1 tariff boosts on imported crude Feb. 1 in an effort to curb domestic consumption and reduce reliance on foreign oil through higher prices.

He later postponed the March and April tariff increases to give Congress more time to draft an alternative plan.

White House sources said Ford would "harshly criticize" the House and Senate for failing to act.

Ford's address will come with Congress in the midst of a 10-day Memorial Day recess and on the eve of his departure for a week long tour of four European capitals.

If Ford chooses to lift the oil import tariff to $2 per barrel, administration officials have said gasoline prices would go up a penny and a half a gallon, other petroleum products prices would climb and many consumers would have to pay more for higher production and distribution costs.

These officials said the President felt higher prices would cut consumption and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil.

Ford, in an interview last Friday, said imposing the extra tariff might spur a Congress that had "failed very badly" by starting its holiday recess without acting on an energy bill.

Democratic congressional leaders have promised quick action on energy legislation after members return June 2nd. But it appeared they were far from united.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved legislation that would raise taxes on gasoline from 3 cents a gallon next January 1 to 20 cents a gallon if consumption is not reduced. That bill also would levy a tax on cars that do not have high fuel efficiency.

The Committee chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., predicted Sunday that the bill would win House approval with few significant revisions.

Ford also has been threatening to start phasing out price controls on all domestically produced oil. The White House announcement Monday gave no indication whether Ford would deal with that in his speech, but administration sources said the President probably would wait a little longer before taking any action in that area.

Tanzania refuses ransom for 3 kidnaped students

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (U P I) — Tanzania Monday rejected a demand by Marxist guerrillas for a half million dollar ransom, weapons and the release of two radical leaders in exchange for the lives of three students they are holding hostage.

A Tanzanian spokesman admitted the decision placed the lives of the hostages—two Americans and a Dutch woman—in considerable danger since the guerrillas had made clear their freedom depended on a positive response by officials.

"The kidnapers have given a 60-day deadline," official spokesman Ben Mkapa said following an emergency cabinet meeting presided over by President Julius Nyerere. "Tanzania has firmly rejected all the demands and this decision is final and will not be changed.

"Tanzania will not be blackmailed," he said. "Now we must wait."

The latest developments occurred after the guerrillas released unharmed Sunday a fourth hostage, Barbara B. Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mkapa said the guerrillas, from the Marxist Popular Revolutionary party in neighboring Zaire, listed their demands in a series of letters they wrote and Miss Smuts carried to Nyerere and American authorities.

The rebels, who have been fighting the central Zaire government for years, captured Miss Smuts and the three others—Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Alhertton, Calif., Kenneth S. Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., and Emilie Bergman, a Dutch national—in a raid eight days ago on a Tanzanian wildlife research center.

The 40 heavily armed guerrilas whisked the hostages 25 miles across Lake Tanganyika, which separates the two countries, to Zaire, where they were kept in a jungle hideout.

The rebels' demands included a ransom of a half million dollars, "large numbers of arms and ammunition including rifles and cannons," and the release from Tanzanian jails of two Zaire guerrilla leaders identified as Gabriel Yumbu and S. Kilinda.

Wood won't identify man who threatened senators

By JOHN L. MOORE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — State Sen. T. Newell Wood declines to identify the man who told him last month that reprisals might be taken against the families of Republican senators attempting to expell Sen. Frank Mazzei from the Pennsylvania Senate.

Wood, who says he did not interpret the remark as a threat, said in a telephone interview over the weekend he is reluctant to identify the man, and may not even tell state and federal investigators who it is — "not unless I had to."

Several of Wood's Republican colleagues say he shocked them last month when he told them someone associated with organized crime had mentioned the possibility of reprisals to him.

But in the interview, Wood said he didn't know if the man has any ties with organized crime. "How do I know? I'm not connected with it myself and so how do I know who is and who isn't," the Senator said.

The incident occurred last month when Republican senators were seeking to oust Mazzei, an Allegheny County Democrat convicted in federal court last November of extortion, from the Senate.

Wood said he was about to enter a Harrisburg restaurant when a man "said he wanted to talk to me for a minute." According to Wood, the man asked about progress of the move to expell Mazzei, told Wood "He was glad" Wood had not signed the ouster resolution, and suggested that senators who did sign the resolution might be subject to reprisals.

Wood said he did not take the remark as a threat. "I don't consider it was a threat to me," Wood said, and added he was "not relaying a threat to them" when he mentioned the statement to the other senators.

Some senators have been quoted as saying Wood indicated to them, the remark was made by a man named Joseph Scalleat of Hazleton, a reputed associate of Mazzei's.

But Wood said this is incorrect. "It was not Scalleat," the Senator said, adding, "I don't believe I ever said it was Scalleat."

The senator also said he believes the incident has been blown out of proportion.

Senate to consider Mazzei's expulsion

HARRISBURG (U P I) — Arguments were to be heard Tuesday in Commonwealth Court on a suit brought by Pittsburgh Mayor Peter Flaherty that demands a special election to replace state Sen. Frank Mazzei, an Allegheny County Democrat convicted of extortion.

And the state Senate is expected to consider June 2 a resolution calling for Mazzei's expulsion.

The resolution is based on a 1963 state law mandating expulsion for office holders convicted of a crime. Mazzei was convicted last year of extortion.

Sen. Thomas Nolan, D-Allegheny, announced over the weekend that the Senate would take up the resolution when it returned June 2. He made it clear that Senate members were upset over a published report that seven Republican members eager for Mazzei's ouster have received threats allegedly conveyed from an organized crime figure.

However, Nolan said the resolution possibly will be amended to allow Mazzei to be reinstated should his conviction be overturned in an appeals court.

Nolan, who has defended Mazzei's right to retain office while on a leave of absence, refused to predict the outcome the Senate debate, but he said it would set a precedent by which the legislature and courts must conduct themselves.

Nolan said he has asked the Justice Department to conduct a "thorough and exhaustive investigation" of the threat, said to have been made by Hazleton dress manufacturer Joseph Scalleat.

Drownings boost toll of holiday fatalities

By United Press International

The traffic toll for the Memorial Day weekend, the first warm-weather holiday of the year, mounted at the predicted pace Monday but drownings increased at a dramatic rate.

A National Safety Council spokesman, referring to the crush of homeward-bound traffic at the end of the three-day holiday, said, "It looks about normal."

He pointed out that the death count mounts steadily in the last hours of a holiday, and said the toll so far indicated the final count was likely to be about midway in the council's estimate that from 400 to 500 persons would die in traffic accidents.

Motorcycle accidents helped swell the traffic toll and boating and swimming accidents boosted the overall holiday death count.

A United Press International count at 12 p.m. EDT showed 374 persons had died on the nation's highways since the holiday period began at 6 p.m. local time Friday. Meanwhile, the death toll in drownings rose to 173, including the death of Robert Shingler Talmadge, son of Sen. Herman Talmadge D-Ga., in Lake Lanier north of Atlanta.

A breakdown of accidental deaths showed:

Traffic	374
Drownings	173
Planes	14
Other	56
Total	617

California had by far the most traffic fatalities with 43. Texas counted 27, Ohio 25, Michigan 22, New York and Florida each 19, Indiana 16 and Georgia 14.

Evel Knievel hangs up crash helmet

LONDON (U P I) — Evel Knievel's attempt to jump over 13 London buses on a motorcycle ended with a spectacular crash Monday and the stuntman, suffering from back, leg and internal injuries, immediately announced that he was hanging up his crash helmet for good.

"I've got to tell you that you are the last people in the world who will see me jump," Knievel told a crowd of 40,000 at Wembley stadium. "I will never jump again."

As he spoke the 34-year-old daredevil was supported by several first aid men who had helped him slowly get up from a stretcher where he had lain, apparently unconscious, for several minutes after the accident.

The crash came as Knievel's motorcycle was at the end of a 100-mile per hour jump over the tops of 13 singledeck London buses lined up side-by-side on the Wembley turf.

Apparently the machine clipped the last of the buses, came down on its front instead of rear wheel and then tumbled over and over in a ball of dust and smoke.

Josie Kerr — man of many talents

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a weekly series by Bobby Westbrook on some of the historic places in this area, the people who built them and how the years have changed them in a countdown through 1975 toward the Bicentennial year of 1976.)

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
STROUDSBURG — Some-how you get the feeling that the convivial John Stroud would have liked the idea of his farm being turned into a country club and golf course — if he'd ever heard of either.

But John didn't have anything to do with that and his descendant would rather have kept the farm which had been in the family for 120 years than the desperation sale which converted his model dairy farm into what is now Glen Brook Country Club.

In between John and Joseph Kerr II, there was a lot of living to be done in the old stone house John's father, Jacob, had built for him. Much of that stemmed from a son-in-law John didn't live to meet, Joseph Kerr.

Josie Kerr, to distinguish him from a grandson by the same name, was born in Ireland in 1788. An Orangeman, he ran away from home at 18 and landed in Philadelphia where he became a pharmacist and made his way to Stroudsburg.

That's where he met Eleanor DePui Stroud, first child of John and Elizabeth DePui Stroud born on Oct. 31, 1794, and named for her grandmother, wife of Nicholas DePui of Shawnee. At that time she was 22 years old and an orphan, her father having died two years before and her mother a year later.

Joseph Kerr and Eleanor Stroud were married on Aug. 19, 1816. Apparently, they spent the early years of their married life in Mount Bethel, which is where their first two daughters, Eliza S. Kerr and Rachel S. Kerr were born.

However, they must have returned to the family homestead outside of Stroudsburg before 1823 since the rest of their children were born there.

Some of them died there. Their oldest son, George, died of scarlet fever in the same epidemic which took the life of his older sister, Rachel, in 1833. The oldest daughter, Eliza S. Kerr, died at the age of 21 of what her great uncle, Daniel Stroud, in a letter to relatives in Ohio as "constriction of the heart."

Another sister, Ann DePui Kerr, married a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Cornelius Lane.

However, it was to Joseph and Eleanor's second son, James Kerr, born in 1827, that the task fell of carrying on the family name and business and the upkeep of what for almost 100 years was known as the Kerr Farm. The bridge is still known on county records as Kerr's bridge.

Beer's commemorative history published about 1900, gives other sidelights on the Kerr family. Josie Kerr was not only a pharmacist and a farmer, but he also served in the state legislature and was a founder and an elder of the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church while it was still located in the 800 block of Sarah St., founded in 1827.

Good morning

When all the kids have grown up, married and moved away, most parents experience a strange new emotion: It's called ecstasy.

Jackets added to Gap list of items for Viet refugees

FT. INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (UPI) — Another item was added Monday to the tons of supplies that have poured into the nation's newest refugee camp — 3,200 surplus Army winter jackets.

The unseasonably cool and cloudy weather that has hit this 20,000-acre National Guard camp in central Pennsylvania is the latest headache the Army has had to deal with in preparing for the 15,000 Vietnamese expected to arrive here over the summer.

But the weatherman says warmer temperatures are on the way, so the jackets may not be needed.

"It's just a precaution," said Col. Paul Teehan, an Army spokesman. "We've heard from the weather bureau. It's supposed to go up into the 80's by Wednesday."

A plane load of 500 refugees was scheduled to arrive at nearby Harrisburg International Airport from Guam Wednesday morning.

The fort, used in the past as a summer training camp for the National Guard, has become a temporary home for 1,800 military personnel who have worked 12-hour days the last week to prepare for the Vietnamese.

"It's the usual, controlled confusion," said one Army officer. "But we're getting things done."

Workmen have set up partitions in 48 barracks, which were built during World War II, and are completing work on 16 barracks today.

Ten mess halls, each equipped to feed 500 persons, are operating. The Army hopes to have 32 dining areas ready by mid-summer.

A hospital unit from Ft. Knox has spent the last three days setting up a 100-bed hospital, using a building last occupied during the Korean War. There are 12 physicians and 39 nurses who are, according to hospital administrator Maj. Robert Aasen, ready to handle everything from routine first aid to delivery of babies and major surgery.

The Army has already hired 111 local workers — mostly secretaries and laborers — and plans to hire 40 more in the near future.

What can the Vietnamese look forward to when they arrive?

Several days of "processing" — which includes the taking of ID pictures, the filling out of computer forms and possible questioning by immigration officials.

Then, a long waiting period as each refugee waits to be assigned to an American sponsor.

Teehan said the most common ailments that hit refugees are "measles, mumps and depression." There are social workers from the Inter-Agency Indo China Task Force, which has 121 workers at the fort.

At the Gap — as it is called — the Army wants to avoid one serious refugee problem encountered on Guam — mass boredom.

One refugee at Guam said of the daily routine: "We go to the food line. Then we eat. Then we sleep. And then we go to the food line again. We sleep much."

Kissinger, Simon attend international energy talks

PARIS (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Treasury Secretary William Simon led the roster of officials from leading non-Communist industrialized nations heading for Paris Monday to attend energy and economic conferences.

Officials said Kissinger and Simon were expected to play major roles in the meetings, designed to spell out common guidelines on energy issues and the Western economic slump.

The conferences will include the first ministerial-level meeting of the 18-nation International Energy Agency today, followed by the annual conference of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development Wednesday and Thursday.

OECD officials said the meetings of foreign and finance ministers will decide whether the industrialized and oil-producing nations will be able to open meaningful talks on energy problems.

They said the meetings may also determine the position of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on its future production and price moves.

OPEC representatives have scheduled a meeting in Gabon June 5 to study plans for a increase of prices of crude in spite of the current decline of oil sales.

Kissinger scheduled a breakfast meeting today with French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing on how to handle the dialogue with the oil producers.

France did not join the U.S.-sponsored International Energy Agency because the oil producers condemned the existence of the organization.

A preliminary conference in April for an oil producers-consumers summit collapsed after tough bargaining over the refusal of the United States and its allies to discuss raw materials as well as energy at the planned conference.

Kissinger indicated recently the United States might make new offers to the oil-producing and third world nations on the issue and indicated Washington's readiness to attend a new preparatory meeting.

Lebanon faces new crisis

BEIRUT (UPI) — Lebanon's first military government in nearly 32 years of independence resigned after three days Monday, sparking a new political crisis for a country its own President described as a "sick man dying."

Ten persons were killed and more than a dozen wounded Monday in violations of a shaky cease-fire between warring Palestinian guerrillas and right-wing Lebanese nationalists, raising the toll from a week of fighting to 77 dead and 225 wounded.

Sporadic shooting and sniping continued in some sections of the capital, although the hail of rocket and mortar fire that has terrorized the city for the past week died down and the cease-fire appeared to be generally holding.

Faced with mounting demands by Moslem and leftist leaders for a return to civilian rule, Brig. Gen. Nureddin Rifai resigned as premier "in order to save the country from bloody incidents."

Rifai came out of retirement Friday at the age of 76 to head a government pledged to end the fighting. His 70 hours in office was the shortest by a Lebanese premier since independence.

A Lebanese military spokesman said Israeli troops crossed the border into southern Lebanon for the second consecutive day, but an Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv denied it, saying Lebanese army forces fired across the border.

Kerr family handed down pharmaceutical profession

He didn't take his duties as elder lightly. Often he would hitch up his big white horse to the carriage and make the rounds to collect prospective members for services.

However, he also had many other interests. His great-grandson, Frank Kerr of Mink Hills, recalls the family story about the time they both were active in the Sunday school, James serving as superintendent and his wife as a teacher.

In addition to his work as a pharmacist, James also devoted a lot of time to the farm. The Stroudsburg Times of Nov. 2, 1888 notes "James H. Kerr building a 1,000 ton icehouse on his farm, expects to dispose of his ice in this place next summer."

And the next year "Mr. James H. Kerr has placed a new ice wagon on the road and will serve the people of this town with pure ice every day of the season."

Meanwhile James and Catherine Coolbaugh Kerr had had two sons, Frank, born in Philadelphia and both Frank, six-foot-four, and Joseph, six-foot-two, served as traveling drug salesmen.

However on March, 1899, the local paper reported "Frank Kerr has given up his position as sales representative for a Scranton medicine firm and will give all his time to the drugstore and ice business."

The drug store at that time was located at Sixth and Main Sts. where Newberry's now stands. Frank entered wholeheartedly into local activities. He also became an elder in the Presbyterian Church and was active in the Royal Arcanum Society, a sort of literary and debating society.

At the untimely age of 30, Frank Kerr died as the result of an infected tooth. The same year 1899, his father James died.

Meanwhile, his brother, Joseph Kerr, had decided to take up medicine and he and Eugene Levering, also of Stroudsburg, had entered City College Medical School in New York City. However, after the two deaths in the family, his mother asked him to come home to take over the drugstore and the farm.

So he did. The drug store by that time had been moved to the upper corner of the same block, a site now occupied by Loeb Rhoads. In 1894, Joseph Kerr married Lelia M. Michaels and his life took on still other dimensions.

What's news

Lightning kills golfers

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — A bolt of lightning killed two golfers and injured two others Monday on a Callaway Gardens course. The incident occurred around 10:30 a.m. on the Garden View golf course when a bolt of lightning struck a grove of trees under which the golfers had taken shelter during a thunderstorm. The two injured men were knocked unconscious for about 45 minutes by the lightning and after coming to they walked to the clubhouse and notified officials.

Sinatra at it again

BERLIN — Frank Sinatra canceled his last scheduled performance of a West German tour Monday in reaction to negative press reviews and fear of an attack. Sinatra's performances in Munich Friday and in Frankfurt Sunday drew as much praise as criticism, although the sprawling halls in which he performed were only half full. The German press blamed age and bad organization for Sinatra's failure to attract the expected crowds. However, his agent in Germany, Marek Lieberberg, accused the press of launching an attack to sabotage the Sinatra concerts from the beginning.

Two perfect landings

NORFOLK, Va. — Robert Crotts couldn't back down from the $10 bet. So the young shipyard worker climbed atop the Berkley Bridge and, nude, performed a swan dive, landing first in the Elizabeth River and then in the city jail. "I knew I could do it and I did it," said Crotts, who got out of jail Monday morning after an overnight stay. Officers who arrested him on disorderly conduct charges saw little humor in Crotts' action. "Underneath those pilings there are rocks," police said. "It's dangerous. Summertime brings on a lot of this and someone is going to get killed."

Camel sees the light?

PHILADELPHIA — City Democratic boss Peter Camiel, whose leadership of the city's party suffered a major blow in last Tuesday's primary, indicated Sunday he might try to smooth differences with arch-enemy Mayor Frank Rizzo — at least if he can't overturn the election. Camiel, who has been avoiding reporters since the defeat of his organization-backed candidate for mayor, State Sen. Louis Hill, said in an interview with the Philadelphia Bulletin he wants the party united. "My role has always been one of a unifier not a divider," he said. "After consulting with other party leaders as to whether they will support Rizzo, I will reserve the right to make my own decision."

Thais review U.S. pacts

BANGKOK — Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj said Monday a review of all agreements between Thailand and the United States would be completed within two months and all American troops would be withdrawn by next March, if not sooner. Kukrit, who met with a North Vietnamese delegation for 30 minutes, also said, "I'm quite certain that North Vietnam and Thailand will open ties very soon." The North Vietnamese delegation, headed by Deputy Foreign Minister Phan Hien, arrived here Wednesday.

Farmer fires on UFW members

HIDALGO, Tex. — A farmer angered by an estimated 50 United Farm Workers he said were tromping through his melon fields and threatening his nonunion workers opened fire with a shotgun Monday and wounded 10 of the UFW group, none seriously. Hidalgo County Deputy Sheriff Elias Juarez said the UFW had demonstrated earlier in the day at the Reynosa International Bridge crossing the Mexican border near this south Texas town to try and stop Mexican nationals who work in Texas fields. The UFW, which has increased organizing activities recently in the Rio Grande Valley, came to the farm of C.L. Miller Jr., 40, about two miles from the border about noon.

Quake shakes up Atlantic floor

MADRID — The world's strongest earthquake in recent years shook the Atlantic Ocean floor between the Azores and the Iberian peninsula Monday, sending some island residents fleeing into the streets and sparking early fears of a tidal wave. There were no immediate reports of casualties or serious damage several hours after the 5:12 a.m. EJT quake. Markus Baath, the director of the Seismological Institute in Uppsala, Sweden, said the quake reached 7.9 on the open-end Richter scale. "It was one of the strongest in the past three years," Prof. Baath said. "There have been a number of 7.7s and 7.8s, but the last highest was an 8.5 near Formosa in 1972."

$1.1 billion grant given to Amtrak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Monday signed a bill authorizing the spending of $1.1 billion to cover operating expenses as well as better equipment and service by Amtrak, the semi-public national rail passenger corporation.

Ford, in a statement announcing his signing of the 1975 Amtrak Improvement Act, said this bill would give the corporation's directors "the flexibility necessary" to manage affairs effectively and "this should result in improved inter-city rail passenger service."

The measure authorized $245 million in appropriations for capital grants, the first time such money has been authorized for Amtrak, and additional spending of $873 million to help Amtrak meet operating expenses through the end of the 1977 fiscal year.

Under the bill, Amtrak also is authorized to set up procedures for discontinuing or adding lines and the Transportation Department is required to buy and restore sections of track that are abandoned under a separate bill providing for regional reorganization of railroad operations.

Ford said in his statement that he found it "regrettable" that the Congress had attached certain restrictions requiring Congress to pass judgment on modification of Amtrak's routes and services. He said the Attorney General had advised him that the provision might be "unconstitutional exercise of Congressional power."

Ford said "I am seriously concerned about the increasing frequency with which Congress passes legislation containing such provisions," but that he was signing this bill "because the nation needs the important passenger rail service it will provide."

Wealthiest taxpayers make wise use of laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury figures show that the wealthiest 1.2 per cent of taxpayers draw 23 per cent of the benefits from tax law exclusions, exemptions, deductions, credits, preferences and deferrals.

These tax provisions — called "tax expenditures" — reduced the amount of taxes that otherwise would have been paid in 1974 by $58 billion, the Treasury figures show.

Of that amount, $13.4 billion in benefits went to the 1.2 per cent of taxpayers whose adjusted gross income was over $50,000.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., a member of the Senate Budget Committee, published the figures Monday with a call for scrutiny of tax expenditures to "make certain they are serving the purposes for which they were intended efficiently and at the lowest possible cost."

"If the federal government is, in effect, going to be spending money to support or reward certain activities, we must determine whether it makes sense to do so under a system which provides the highest benefits to those with the highest incomes," Mondale said.

The 46.9 per cent of taxpayers with adjusted gross income — income minus business expenses — of $10,000 or less received only $8.6 billion worth of tax relief from tax expenditures — 16.6 per cent of the total.

Said Mondale: "Many tax expenditures serve a legitimate purpose and they should be continued. Others need to be examined to see whether they can be restructured so that their benefits are distributed more broadly and equitably."

Cisterns keep on quenching in West End

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — There are still a few families in the West End who will never have to worry about the quality of their drinking water, no matter how polluted our streams and wells may get.

The reason is that they have huge underground rainwater collection tanks called cisterns built into the basements of their homes from 100 and 50 years ago, when running water was unheard of.

Ranging in sizes from eight feet by 10 feet to 12 feet by 12 feet, the cisterns usually are eight feet deep. They are more like huge covered swimming pools that for years have retained fresh, cool rainwater all year long.

Having to be cleaned out about once every two years, the cisterns are usually drained and cleaned in the late summer and early fall, so that the cool winter rain and snows can be collected into the depository.

A section of rain spouting usually goes directly into the cistern, which is covered to keep out dirt, bugs, and leaves.

A butterfly clamp on the pipe allows the first run-off during storms to be discarded because this washes off bird dirt, dead spiders and other dirt from the roof.

When the water looks clear, the clamp is turned the other way and clear rain water runs into the cistern. Water collected in this way stays cold even throughout the summer months.

Usually attached to the back kitchen, the cistern years ago was originally installed in about one in every five houses in the West End. Now there are little more than five operating cisterns altogether in this rural part of the county. Although the Department of Environmental Resources may question the quality of the water, the West Enders claim it is nearly 100 per cent pure.

Water was never collected during thunderstorms years ago because it was said to contain nitrogen, which would turn the water cloudy and leave a sediment in the cistern.

From the cistern, the water was usually pumped up to a sink in the kitchen with a hand pump. When it rained frequently, there was plenty of water for the entire family, but when there was a dry season in the summer, water was used sparingly.

Even in the plentiful times, however, every member of the family got a weekly bath with the youngest getting first dip in the family wooden tub.

At first the water had to be heated on the stove. Richer families had a huge 20-gallon hot water collection tank mounted on the back of their modern wood stoves, however, and it supplied hot water all the time.

Although modern-day commercials claim that rain water is the ideal thing to make for a softer wash, the West End housewife of 50 years ago already discovered that secret.

It was thought that rain water was what was needed to put an extra shine on the hair, too.

And dad claimed that only pure rain water could be used in the batteries of those new fangled cars. Much later mother discovered that rain water was softer and less corrosive for her newly invented steam iron.

And it was rain water that could turn a stubborn barrel of cider into vinegar in a mere six weeks.

26 acres cost $75,000

Toby assumes park ownership

Mount Pocono Bureau
POCONO PINES — After two years of legal entanglements, transactions have been completed and Tobyhanna Township now has ownership of its park.

The former Pine Tree Girls Camp was leased by the township for a community recreational area in May, 1972. It was leased for a three-year period with option to buy at anytime.

Purchase price for the 26-acre tract is $75,000.

In September of last year the board of supervisors awarded the $75,000 note to the Northeastern Bank of Pennsylvania to be financed at the rate of six per cent annually.

The tract, located on old Rte. 940 with entrance at the Pocono Pines Post Office, was purchased from Patricia Fox Taylor of Philadelphia. It will be known as the Blanche D. Price Memorial Park.

A Master Plan is being drafted by William Hopkins, township consulting engineer from Hess Associates of Stroudsburg.

Plans call for the construction of a government center on three acres. The center will consist of a meeting room, township secretary office, and police department. Space will also be allocated for township equipment.

There are four existing buildings at the site. Studies will be conducted to determine if renovations can be done.

It is anticipated one building will be used for a teen center. The township library will also be located at the park.

For the past two years one building has been cleaned and used for renting for private parties, receptions, and family reunions.

Scattered about the wooded areas are a dozen or more wooden shelters, once used by the camp as outdoor sleeping areas. It is anticipated some will become outdoor picnic shelters.

Also located in the park is a pool built by the camp ten years ago at a cost of $18,700. The pool has been used for the past three summers and is one of the favorite spots for area adults and children.

Two regulation tennis courts now exist on the property and are being put in shape for use this summer. A regulation Little League baseball field is being constructed and will be used next year. Other sports facilities are planned.

The Pocono Mountain Womens Club has requested space in the park in order to further carry out their plans for the Bicentennial.

The women have stated they want to construct an 18th century garden with a bandstand type structure. The club will be consulting with the township engineer and recreation committee in order to formulate plans to be approved by supervisors.

Members of the Recreation Committee are: Eugene Miller, chairman; Tom Smith; Donald Judge; Austin Blakeslee, Jr.; Richard Smith; Oliver Strauss; and Robert Fisher.

Miller said the park will open the weekend of June 9 with a summer program.

Cub racers head for district derby

NEWFOUNDLAND — Cub Scout Pack 129 of Newfoundland held its Pinewood Derby recently in the gymnasium of the Newfoundland Elementary School, with five scouts winners heading for the District Derby in Honesdale on May 31.

Scouts who will be competing in the District Derby are: Billy Butts, first place winner; David Stein, second place; David Yohannan, third place; David Seashock, fourth place; and Sean Burke, fifth place.

Robert Kreiger was in charge of weights, Paul Seashock, and Jim Gustafson were starters.

Judges for the event were: Robert Kreiger and Burton Gilpin, Jr.

The repair crew comprised of Vic Stein, Pat Stein, Lois Butts and Joan Seashock.

Paul Seashock, assistant Cubmaster, awarded badges to the following: Stephen Steinbauch, and David Yohannan, Wolf Badges; Larry Ferrati, Bob Cat and Wolf Badge; Chris Cykosky, and Billy Butts, Bear, one Gold and Two Silver Arrows.

David Stein and Larry Ferrati were awarded the Webelos

Athlete Activity Badge.

Webelos Day will be held June 28 at Goose Pond. All boys who are 10 years of age or have completed fourth grade are eligible for Webelos.

Interested persons may contact Vic Stein, Webelos leader at 676-4371 for information.

Police blotter

Cruelty conviction

HAWLEY — A Wayne County man was found guilty of cruelty to animals at a 2:30 p.m. hearing Friday before District Magistrate Allen V. Campfield.

Neil Rannell of Honey Hills Farm was found guilty and fined $91, according to Edwin Cantrill, director of the Monroe County branch of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Cantrill said he began investigating last March after receiving an anonymous tip from a neighbor and found 11 of 24 cows died of neglect.

Hearing continued

STROUDSBURG — A Stroudsburg man's hearing before District Magistrate Graden Praetorius was continued and transferred to another magistrate when the defendant didn't have legal counsel.

Praetorius said Rick Stumpp of Stroudsburg was charged with possession of a small amount of marijuana but did not have a defender.

Stumpp was sent to a public defender and his hearing was transferred to District Magistrate Eleanor Randolph on June 3 at 3:30 p.m.

Theft charged

BRODHEADSVILLE — Wilbur Leon Batchler, 20, Brodheadsville, was charged with theft by unlawful taking and receiving stolen property at 10 a.m. Friday.

He was accused of taking two truck batteries from Gerald Thomas of 5 Park Lane, Sun Valley, about May 16 at 6 p.m., according to District Magistrate Glenn Borger.

Borger said Batchler was released on $1 nominal bail. A hearing was set for May 30 at 5 p.m.

The arresting officer was Trooper David Gurad of state police at Fern Ridge.

Burglary arrest

TANNERSVILLE — A Carbon County man was charged with burglary and released on $2,500 bail Friday after a hearing before District Magistrate Gerald Canfield.

Gary Fronheiser waived a preliminary hearing on charges of a burglary at a Hamilton Township residence on May 13, according to state police at Swiftwater.

The investigating officer was Trooper Thomas Mastruzzo.

Auto theft charged

BARTONSVILLE — Robert Goucher Jr., of 61 State St., East Stroudsburg, was released on his own recognizance Friday following a hearing for allegedly stealing a car.

District Magistrate Gerald Canfield of Tannersville said Goucher was charged with theft by unlawfully taking a car from the 76 Truck Stop at Bartonsville between Feb. 20 and 22.

Investigating officer was Trooper Alfred Drozdowski of state police at Swiftwater.

Cemetery to receive renovations

HAWLEY — A group of area residents has organized a committee to restore the old Hawley cemetery.

The group is forming plans to clear and refurbish the old cemetery on Hudson Street and also raise funds to provide for its future maintenance.

Ray Murray said support for the plan has been enthusiastic and some contributions have already been received.

The cemetery committee has contacted area religious, fraternal, service and civic groups for support.

Approximately 30 per cent of the lots in the 1.7 acre cemetery have been taken care of by the Green Gates Cemetery Association.

The remaining section of about an acre is abandoned, overgrown with brush and cluttered with litter and debris.

The cemetery was established in the 1880s and a group of local citizens became trustees for the unoccupied section in the early 1900s.

Maintenance funds were obtained from families of people buried there.

MAKE YOUR WATER HEATER AN ENERGY SAVER!

Since they make hot water available in your home 24 hours a day, everyday, water heaters are substantial energy users. By the same token however, they do offer one of your best opportunities to conserve energy.

Best of all, every time you save energy (whether electricity, gas or oil), you'll save money, too. Here's how . . .

- Turn water heater thermostats down to a maximum 140 degrees. For safety's sake however, before adjusting, turn power off at circuit breaker or fuse box.
- Insulate hot water pipes to help prevent heat-loss as water travels from your water heater to points-of-use. A fiberglass wrapping is available from most hardware or building supply stores.
- Consider wrapping additional insulation around the sides and top of your electric hot water tank.
- Water heaters may be turned down or "off" while on vacation but when turning off, always follow manufacturer's instructions.

WHEN INSTALLING NEW WATER HEATERS . . .

- Eliminate long pipe runs by locating water heater as close as possible to the points of hot water use. In some cases, using more than one water heater (smaller sizes) to accomplish this can be beneficial.
- Size the water heater to match your family's needs.
- Look for a high efficiency unit with thick tank insulation.
- Low wattage water heaters generally use less kilowatt hours of electricity annually than higher wattage, quick-recovery types.

TIPS ON REDUCING HOT WATER CONSUMPTION . . .

- Showers on average use only about half as much hot water as tub baths.
- An inexpensive "flow restrictor" device installed in shower heads can cut flow by 50%.
- A leaking faucet can waste hundreds of gallons of hot water per year. Repair is simple . . . the savings great!
- Operate clothes washers and dishwashers less frequently by using full loads. Also use shorter cycles whenever possible. Rely more on "cold and warm" water settings for laundering.
- In general, never use hot water when "cold" will do!

An energy saving message from PP&L

Confidence premature

President Ford's confidence that the people of the United States have "snapped out" of their mood of isolationism may be premature.

In drawing his conclusion, we fear the President is relying rather heavily on the favorable public reaction to the rescue of the American freighter Mayaguez and its crew from the Cambodian government.

It is foolhardy to link a daring, dramatic response to such an arrogant slap in the face as the Mayaguez seizure with the sort of international intervention Ford, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and their advisers have in mind when they refer to our "commitments" abroad.

To be sure, there is little likelihood that the American people would rise in protest against our going to the rescue of, let's say, England or almost any part of Western Europe. We might even see agreement that Japan is worth saving at the cost of our blood and money.

But those small, Third-World nations that have mutual defense ties with us (a peculiar prospect, that; the defense seems to be considerably one-sided) don't represent the sort of loss we suspect would galvanize Americans and send them rushing to the battlefronts.

The notion that neo-isolationism has lost its impetus can be a dangerous one to hold. The protest over Vietnam, although it took several years to build, has left scars that will take as many years to heal. The reaction to another foray into a small foreign country, especially in Asia (and perhaps the Mideast: Israel has few illusions about the extent of our commitments there) would in all probability be dreadful to contemplate. It could wrack this nation into ruin.

We don't mean to defend that attitude. We do intend to point out that President Ford is making a serious mistake to assume that because he was cheered for sending in the Marines to rescue an American ship and crew, it has suddenly become just fine for him to indulge again in that form of international cops-and-robbers game that cost Lyndon Johnson the presidency and the United States a hefty measure of self-respect, self-confidence and self-belief.

Capital pay raises

Unemployment in the United States is at its highest since 1941. More than eight million Americans don't have jobs. One way or another the nation has to take care of them financially so that they and their families can at least exist.

Despite the financial pinch, the state House of Representatives proposes to give $7,000 yearly increases to the three members of the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board. The House has voted to raise the chairman's pay from $18,000 to $25,000 and the salaries of the other two members — both part-time officials — from $17,000 to $24,000.

That should make the unemployed happy.

No one has ever accused the members of the Liquor Control Board of working too hard or too successfully in behalf of the state's consumers, who pay among the highest prices in the country for their liquor.

In this respect, the board members haven't earned pay increases. In fact, it might be argued that in view of the way the board has been passing on higher liquor prices with more frequency and with less fussing, the board members might take a cut in their salaries.

Then there's the question as to whether the present board members can qualify under the state's Constitution for pay raises during their current terms.

However, the generous Representatives have apparently gotten around this restriction on a technicality.

But the question still remains: Why should the members of the Liquor Control Board get $135-a-week raises?

The plain fact is that they have been doing a lousy job for Pennsylvania drinkers, and that's most of us, and just don't deserve to be rewarded.

Stamp news

Canadian issues set

By RAY PATTON

Canada will issue four eight-cent stamps May 30 commemorating famous Canadians: Marguerite Bourgeoys, Alphonse Desjardins, Samuel Chown and John Cook.

The United States commemorative for the Battle of Bunker Hill will have first day sale June 17 at Charlestown, Mass. This will be in the semi-jumbo size printed 40 to a pane with six plate numbers.

The United Nations will issue four postage stamps and two souvenir sheets to commemorate their 30th anniversary. The New York values will be a 10- and 26-cent values and the Swiss will be a 60 and 90 cent values.

The two souvenir sheets will be one with the New York values and the other with the Swiss values. On June 26, when these are released, for one day only the United States government has agreed to allow the United Nations the privilege of providing First Day cancellations in San Francisco where the United Nations Charter was signed 30 years ago. Collectors desiring this cancel must send their covers to the United Nations marked "For San Francisco Cancel."

Behind the Mayaguez: What Ford told Congress

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

U.S. armed forces into hostilities or into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated."

But not until he had already ordered the Marines to go ahead with the rescue operation did Ford call congressional leaders to the White House on May 14. Then he notified them of the action; it would be stretching to say he consulted them. But he encountered little opposition from the leaders. House Speaker Carl Albert merely asked how they should "answer charges in the House of violation of the War Powers Act."

The President simply stated that he hadn't violated the act. "I conceive that each step I've taken has been within my powers," he said. "I believe that regardless of the July 1973 legislation, I have the authority I am using as commander-in-chief."

He had fulfilled his obligation, he said, by "advising" them of the military move after it was underway. "We reached our decision at 5:50 p.m.," he said. "(Then) we called you in."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield also expressed "apprehension," particularly over striking the Cambodian mainland.

But Sen. Clifford Case, R.-N.J., who helped draft the War Powers Act, defended the President. "As the author of the act," he said, "I disagree with Mike, I don't think the act applies to piracy. It was intended to cover aggressive action."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield

also expressed "apprehension," particularly over striking the Cambodian mainland.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va., the Democratic whip, asked why the leaders weren't consulted "at least at the time the decision was being made." He, too, was concerned over the bombing missions against the Cambodian mainland.

Urging caution

"Perhaps the leaders could have made their input, perhaps to urge caution in striking those targets," suggested Byrd.

"(This is) a proper question and I'll answer it," said Ford. "As commander-in-chief, I have the responsibility to protect U.S. citizens consistent with the War Powers Act." He had ordered the bombing of the mainland, he said, to protect the rescue operation.

"I'm in no position to say your position is wrong or outside your authority," Byrd pressed, "but why were not some leaders on both sides brought in before your decision?"

"Bob," replied the President, "there has been continuous contact with the leaders. But we have a government of separation of powers. We have lived within the law as it relates to our obligation to a coordinate branch of the government."

Then as an afterthought, he added: "We did have a time problem to coordinate our planning."

In the first test of the War Powers Act, the President re-established his authority to order military forces into action with no more than advance notification of Congress.

Footnote: Intelligence reports suggest that the Mayaguez incident may have been part of a Cambodian strategy to assert sovereignty over the oil bed that may lie off the Wei Islands. Geologists have reported signs of undersea oil in this vicinity.

The new Communist government in Phnom Penh moved quickly to occupy the islands, which are also being claimed by the new Saigon regime.

U.S. satellite photos at the height of the crisis showed only rock and foliage on the island of Tang where the Marines landed. Therefore, they had not expected the heavy resistance they encountered.

Apparently, the Cambodians had moved in troops to claim the islands and gunboats to challenge any ships that ventured too close. Their purpose, the intelligence reports indicate, may have been to claim the potential oil under the ocean.

DID FORD VIOLATE WAR POWERS ACT? The facts: There is no barrier to a President's initial use of U.S. troops in any emergency. There are three requirements: (1) The President must consult Congress in advance; (2) he must report to Congress in 48 hours; (3) he must end such use of force within 90 days if Congress does not approve.

President Ford observed all of these requirements.

One question is raised: In informing all the appropriate committees what he planned to do to rescue the Mayaguez, did the President really "consult" Congress?

There was ample opportunity for congressmen to object. They raised no objections. There was ample opportunity for congressmen to offer alternative actions. They offered none.

Ford followed the law fully and faithfully.

DEMOCRATS SHIFTING STANCE IN CONGRESS. They are giving closer heed to President Ford's warnings about the inflationary dangers of overspending.

The House recently sustained the President's veto of the high-cost farm bill by 40 voters. It foreshadows things to come.

Next is the prospect that Ford will veto a heavy federal subsidy to stimulate home building as too inflationary. Even the bill's supporters are doubtful if they can override.

The reason is that voter opinion is showing itself acutely concerned about the near $80 billion federal deficit — and the liberal Democrats are apparently listening.

SCHOOL VANDALISM AND VIOLENCE CONSTANTLY GROWING. Violent crime in every form — murder, mayhem, rape and vandalism — is getting worse in the public schools in every state of the nation.

In recent weeks students in the District of Columbia murdered a classmate, raped a young woman teacher and beat another student senseless with a lead pipe.

This is typical, and it takes place everywhere — in the inner city, in middle-income and affluent suburbs.

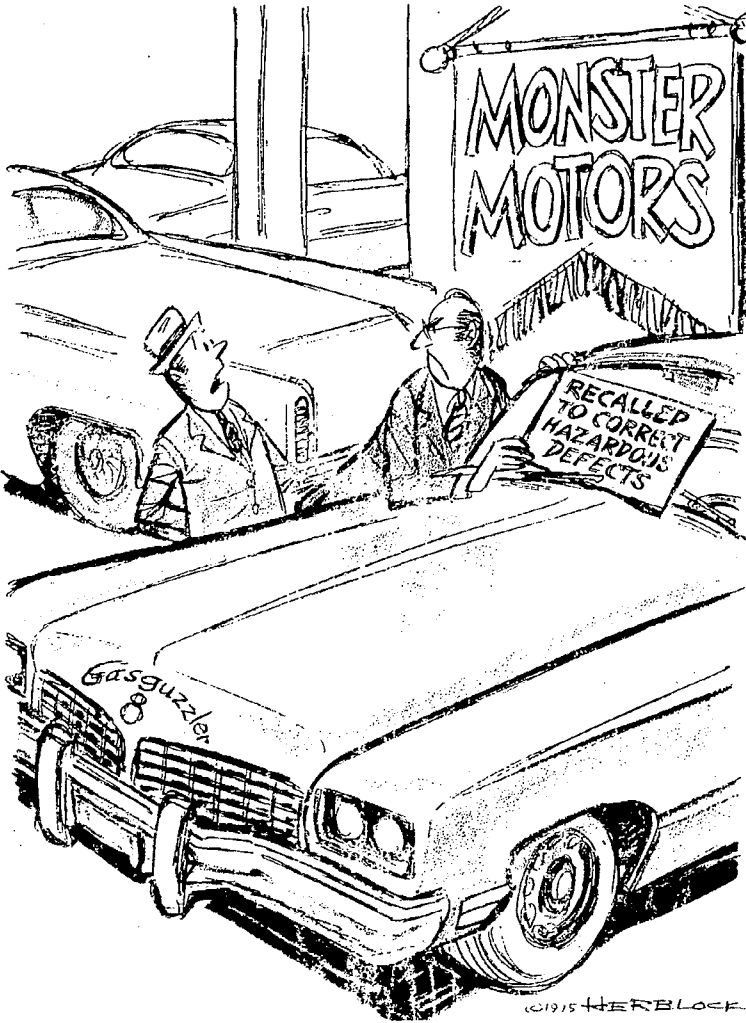

The nationwide picture is grim:

At least 70,000 teachers are being assaulted every year; 155,000 schools were subjected to serious property damage; 100 students were murdered in 1973.

From 1970 to 1973 homicide in public schools increased by 18 per cent rape and attempted rape by 40 per cent, robberies by 36 per cent, assault on students by 85 per cent and assault on teachers by 77 per cent.

These crimes take place in the classrooms, in the corridors and on the playgrounds. Malignant damage came to almost $600 million last year — three times higher than in 1971, more than was being spent on textbooks.

Teen-agers from 10 to 17 make up 16 per cent of the population and account for 45 per cent of all arrests for serious crime. The public schools are their crime sites.

'Now that you're not selling so many,
maybe you could try making them better'

'Human Kindness Day' ghoulishly inappropriate name

Jeffrey Hart

'Rep. Ron Dellums, black leftist from Berkeley, Calif., has been complaining that the media played up, for racist reasons, the horrendous occurrences at the recent Human Kindness Day in Washington, D.C.

My own impression is just the reverse. Human Kindness Day was incredible, and also instructive, but how much have you yourself, for example, heard about it? Probably not much, if anything at all.

The name Human Kindness Day, first of all, was ghoulishly inappropriate, and Jonathan Swift and George Orwell must be getting a big kick out of it somewhere.

On the day in question, some 125,000 people turned up at the Washington Monument for a concert by Stevie Wonder, a blind rock star. This conclave was a mere golf shot from the window of President Gerald Ford's Oval Office.

There then transpired an orgy of violence with strong racial overtones. According to all reports, and to all eyewitnesses I have talked with, blacks — roaming bands of ghetto toughs — were the aggressors. Hundreds of people went to the hospital. Rapes, robberies, and savage beatings took place in broad daylight. One participant in Human Kindness Day had his right eye put out by an ice pick.

Little help

While all this was going on, the huge crowd remained largely passive, and the District of Columbia police did little to help the victims or restrain the toughs. One witness I talked with, a cab driver, saw a girl (white) slugged and kicked around while several policemen stood idly by. It was later reported that the D.C. police had specific orders not to act against blacks committing acts of violence. The official view was that the police were too few in number to handle a race riot if police action precipitated one, and this was probably true.

The whole thing was a grotesque footnote to the greening-of-America, we-shall-overcome visions of the 1960s. St. Augustine and Thomas Hobbes must be roaring with laughter. Rock concerts are supposed to be tribal rites of communion among people — "Kids," inevitably — assumed to be naturally gentle and good: Thus the pop singer Peter Yarrow recently recalled: "I remember the feeling then — that somehow by coming together we could make a life in which people would not kill or hurt each other any more."

Well, it's not working out quite that way. Where have all the flowers gone? I have to tell you. They turned up at the Washington Monument on Human Kindness Day.

Thomas Hobbes was right, Peter Yarrow wrong. When civilized restraints break down, we slide toward the state of nature in which life is solitary, nasty, brutish and short. And, ultimately, the guarantor of those restraints is the policeman's monopoly of force. George Wallace senses this and expresses the point hyperbolically when he says that the way to reduce street crime in the District of Columbia would be to move a division of troops in.

The outrages in Washington point to one inescapable conclusion. These mass rock concerts are chronic generators of personal violence and property damage. It may be necessary to ban them, but, at the very least, their sponsors ought to be held responsible for providing the police protection necessary to maintain order. Such protection would evidently have to be massive. But why should the community foot the bill? And why should any community put up with the kind of total breakdown that occurred as a kind of early bicentennial celebration at the Washington Monument?

New code of conduct

Meanwhile, the school system in neighboring St. George's County, Maryland, provides some accompanying grace notes. According to a teacher there, the new code of conduct provides that there will be "No suspensions for fighting, use of alcohol, carrying dangerous weapons, persistent disobedience or use of firecrackers . . . Suspensions occur only if the behavior of a student is so dangerous that it poses an immediate threat to the safety of others."

That must be an interesting "learning environment." No doubt some of the "students" turned up at the Washington Monument for Human Kindness Day.

And over in Cambodia, one notes, the victorious Communists have held their own Human Kindness Day, celebrating it in Phnom Penh according to the local rites.

Letters to the editor

Finds lack of official response grounds for apathy

Editor, The Record:

Last week my husband attended the Stroud Township Planning and Zoning meeting. I attended a gathering at the Municipal Building on Fifth Street. We both came home with the same feeling. Is it really going to matter what concerned residents feel and express?

Apathy — easy to come by after one of these sessions.

I fully realize, and feel most citizens do also, that there must be planning and expansion to keep a community vital. But the answers given on the above occasions to some good questions certainly left a lot to be desired and basically lacked what I feel is any real interest by a group to hear out and use wisely suggestions from residents who are truly interested in their county and community — not just their neighborhood.

Considering change in lands that have not had basic tests for drainage, etc., is simply ridiculous.

From what I was told last year, Stroud Township doesn't have a recent survey to define boundaries. A questionable area now has a building whose construction had been denied. The owner claimed the supervisors could prove him out of line. The cost of the survey to be the responsibility of the township. When I questioned the construction, I was told the township could not afford to survey the line.

I understand that due to financial problems, the business never went into operation, consequently we may now watch this building become an overgrown eyesore if not sold.

These plans may be fine on paper, but you gentlemen who plan, and you gentlemen who supervise, and perhaps have the final say in these situations are in my opinion falling short if you do not consider more seriously — the realities. We are a people who have chosen this area to live, and raise our families. Somehow I get the feeling that Mr. Resident is going to lose out to his efforts to keep areas livable.

I'd love to be wrong!

CAROL A. ADELMANN
Stroudsburg

Already an airport

Editor, The Record:

It seems to be a popular misconception in the Pocono area that we are in need of a modern aviation facility, when indeed such service is and has been available here for some time. A full service aviation facility offering modern air transportation and professional services to businessmen and tourists exists now at the East Stroudsburg Airport.

Stroudsburg-Pocono Airways, Inc. operates an FAA-certified air taxi and air freight service with professional pilots and the latest modern aircraft available today. The operation offers 24-hour, all-weather service from this local airport which has a paved runway with lights, beacon, three FAA-approved instrument approaches and aviation weather reporting. Professional pilots, flying aircraft equipped with all the latest equipment found in airline type aircraft, operate from Stroudsburg to JFK, LaGuardia, Philadelphia, Washington and any number of other airports throughout the United States on a routine basis.

This facility is used by numerous corporate and private planes daily, including turbo jet and jet aircraft such as the Citation, to conduct business in the Stroudsburgs.

All this and more is here now, has been for over three years, and hasn't cost the county or municipal taxpayers one red cent. On the contrary, it contributes taxes to help support the county and township, as well as bring to the Poconos the latest in modern air transportation of the 1970s.

Airports are a business offering a service, and Stroudsburg Airport is just this, already offering a complete range of aviation services and facilities, and operating successfully for those who need these services.

Financial help is not sought or expected from the county for the Stroudsburg Airport, since it is not county property; and neither is any other airport the property or responsibility of Monroe County — another popular misconception.

Be it an airport, department store, resort, or whatever business, because it cannot support itself is not reason to expect support from county tax dollars simply because it is located within the county.

Modern aviation is here to stay and will continue to grow and progress. To think not is naive and narrow-minded. Expansion and growth should be the result of a successful, prosperous business and occurs with proper management and good business sense. Expansion necessary to fulfill a need is justifiable, but to expand for the sake of expanding is wasteful — just being there is not enough.

Newspaper conflicts

By ALAN GOULD JR.

As you may know, we have seven departments under The Pocono Record roof.

Various they gather the news, sell the ads, produce the type, print the paper, distribute it and keep our accounts. They are all run (and staffed) by wise and honorable people (naturally) and yet, believe it or not, they are often in conflict. Oh yes.

A frequent area of confrontation is between the newsroom, where Ron Bouchard is editor, and the ad departments where Charley Edmondson, our ad director, runs display and Mac Below is classified manager.

A principle of good newspapering is that you do not let advertisers influence your news coverage. A corollary is that you do not deny news coverage to someone or something simply because they are an advertiser.

It may surprise you that we admit The Record violates the principle in two areas — and on purpose. One is in the regular "Everybody's Business" column on the business page. There we edit "loosely" as industry and business present their cases. The other is in our frankly labeled "advertising supplements" in which, our experience tells us, the readers (and advertisers) want and expect material to complement the ads. Our "Home Improvement", "Kitchen Ideas" and the monthly Real Estate Review are examples.

There is not always a clear definition between news and promotion material. Thus conflict.

A few months ago we ran a detailed Dow Jones story on "how to sell your own home" in the Real Estate Review. In the daily Record this would have been a legitimate consumer story. We even tried to make a case for putting it in the Review but few advertisers listened.

If you're in the business of brokering homes, you're going to feel rather stabbed if a story beside your ad advises people to stay away from you.

The story on the Review is that it is unique, at least in our state. It runs the last weekend of each month unabashedly as a promotion for the sale of Pocono property. Putting all the advertisers together makes it a terrific package for them and it's a bargain as well. We charge only a small premium on regular ad rates and yet besides our 15,500 regular subscribers we distribute 6,000 extra copies, mostly by mail to people in Jersey, New York and the Philadelphia area who have asked us to send it to them. It is no place to knock real estate but the daily paper is exempt. News is news.

Last month reporter Deborah Enyeart did a factual job on some of the complications and pitfalls of buying homesites in the Poconos. It ran six days in the daily Record. It frequently made the point that the "many" reputable developers were being damaged by the "few" who are not. My view is that Deborah was more than fair.

However, one of our "reputable" developers quickly canceled his advertising. We have no apology to make.

The life of the ad sales staff may be temporarily complicated for to them the customer is almost always right. But in the newsroom the customer is more likely viewed with suspicion (he may be trying to get free ad space in our news columns). Conflict.

In the final analysis integrity in the newsroom is our most important asset. It is the reader, the fellow citizen who should come first. He deserves our fairest, most honest shot with his news. And, as a matter of fact, most of our ad customers are also readers and they have a mighty stake in our integrity too.

Russians' space linkup successful

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soyuz 18 cosmonauts made a perfect docking with the Salyut 4 space station in pitch darkness Monday and began a program of scientific work that indicated they may be planning a long stay aboard the craft, the Tass news agency said.

After a sleep period when Salyut was out of contact with ground control, "the cosmonauts got down to fulfilling the program of reactivating the station, checking onboard systems and preparing scientific equipment for research," Tass said.

Tass said it was 90 minutes before ground control learned that cosmonauts Lt. Col. Pyotr Klimuk and civilian engineer Vitaly Sevastiyarov had accomplished the docking in darkness and during a communications blackout.

Automatic systems guided Soyuz to within 100 yards of Salyut, after which the cosmonauts switched to manual controls and glided to a shock-free docking, Tass said.

Tass said the cosmonauts switched on lights aboard the 20-ton, three-roomed, cylindrical spaceship, checked the vital system, slept and began checking out the 2.5 tons of scientific equipment aboard the craft.

Klimuk and Sevastiyarov are the second crew aboard the Salyut.

Lt. Col. Alexei Gubarev and civilian engineer Georgi Grechko left the spacecraft Feb. 9 after spending 28 days aboard and setting a Soviet space endurance record. The world record is 84 days spent aboard the American Skylab.

Pa. officials launch new Instant Lottery

HARRISBURG (UPI) — In an effort to overcome sagging sales, Pennsylvania lottery officials will launch the new Instant Lottery at noon today and will discontinue the Lucky 7 game after Thursday's drawing.

The Instant Lottery offers ticket buyers an immediate shot at a payoff, and officials are hoping that the new feature will draw buyers to ticket windows over and over again.

A ticket buyer can find out if he is an instant winner by erasing the covering on certain spaces on the new $1 ticket with a coin.

Each ticket will carry six spaces: a keystone at the top, four circles in the middle and a square at the bottom.

If one of the circled numbers matches the keystone number, the player instantly wins two free tickets. If two circled numbers match the keystone number, the player wins $5, to be paid immediately by the sales agent.

The ticket buyer will win $1,000 if three circled numbers match the keystone number and $10,000 if all four circled numbers match the keystone number. The $1,000 and $10,000 prizes are mailed from here.

Congressional roll call

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In key roll call votes last week, the House voted for the first time to allow women to compete on the same basis with men for entry into the service academies.

The amendment was attached to a $32 billion authorization bill to purchase military hardware during the fiscal year beginning July 1. Several efforts to reduce this figure and cut U.S. troop strength abroad failed.

The House also sanctioned four new increases in congressional expense accounts totaling more than $10 million, and put off an attempt to override President Ford's veto of the strip mining bill.

The Senate voted to resume sales of U.S. military aid to Turkey.

The House:

— A bill authorizing $32 billion to purchase military equipment during the fiscal year beginning July 1, passed 332-64.

Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, yes; Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15, absent.

— An amendment that permits women to enter the service academies on the same basis as men, passed 303-96.

McDade, yes; Rooney, absent.

— An amendment that sought to reduce the military authorization bill by $1.89 billion, rejected 183-216.

McDade, no; Rooney, absent.

— An amendment to reduce U.S. overseas forces by 70,000 by September 30, 1976, defeated 95-311.

McDade, no; Rooney, no.

— An amendment that sought to delete $108 million for development of the B-1 bomber, defeated 164-227.

McDade, no; Rooney, no.

— A motion to delay until June 10 an attempt to override President Ford's veto of the strip mining bill, passed 208-195.

McDade, no; Rooney, yes.

— An amendment to a legislative appropriations bill that sought to prohibit the use of any funds to pay for increases in members' allowances for travel, staff and office expenses, defeated 148-262.

McDade, yes; Rooney, yes.

— A bill authorizing $5 billion in federal grants to construct local public works projects during fiscal year 1976, passed 312-86.

McDade, yes; Rooney, yes.

The Senate:

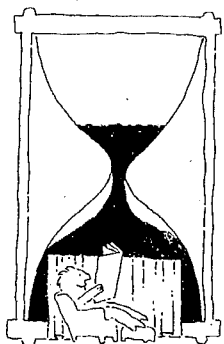

— A bill to resume U.S. military assistance to Turkey, passed 41-40.

Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., yes; Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., no.

— A $16 billion supplemental appropriations bill for the duration of fiscal year 1975, passed 76-14.

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes.

How to set up your own pension plan

If you work for a firm that doesn't offer a retirement plan, or if you're self-employed, there is now a way you can provide for your "Golden Years" with an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at United Penn Bank.

SAVE UP TO $1500 A YEAR FREE FROM FEDERAL INCOME TAXES UNTIL YOUR RETIREMENT

Recently enacted changes in federal law now permit you to deduct up to 15% of your annual income or $1500, whichever is less, provided the money is invested in an approved plan, such as our IRA program.

You pay no federal taxes on this money, nor on the interest it accumulates, until you retire and begin to make withdrawals.

Corporate employers, labor unions, and employee associations should also ask about how IRA can work to their benefit.

Ask for complete details at any of our offices.

REA & DERICK DRUGS

CHIROPRACTIC IN MENOPAUSE Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, D.C.

The question is often asked if Chiropractic can help Menopause. The answer is Yes. Many women accept menopause with relative comfort indicating that this time of life should not be accompanied by distress. Other women pass through menopause with much distress, with a great deal of variance of effects. Such as irritability, insomnia, palpitation, hot flashes, and flushing of the face; all due to instability of the nervous system regulating the circulation and hormone balance.

The nervous system often can be effectively regulated with Chiropractic and reduce many or all of distress symptoms.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the scientific practice of Chiropractic, written by Dr. Thomas Franklin Snyder, Chiropractic Orthopedist, Brodheadsville, Pa. 18322, Phone: 992-4787).

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

HOLLYWOOD — All those reconciliations didn't work: Phyllis Diller and Warder Donovan get the divorce any edition ... Dinah and Burt are acting Curt ... The Mexican gov't is considering casino gambling again, confined to one elegant jernt each in Acapulco and Mexico City; one Mafia stooge moved momentarily to Mexico several brawls ago but was too controversial himself to make a dent — he breaks one cardinal rule of the mob: "brings heat" ... We saw an actress kiss a critic! Oscar-Tony-awarded Ellen Burstyn bussing Dick Watts in "21"; Dick is '77 but still may remember why ... Britain's Queen Liz believes in planning ahead: she reserved the Royal Box at London's Adelphi Theater for a "A Little Night Music" in June.

Next season will see Harry Truman's comeback: James Whitmore's one-snarl "Give 'Em Hell, Harry" mini-play will vie for Bdwy. audiences with the full-dress play, "Plain Speaking"; and a movie's imminent based on Margaret Truman Daniel's book.

N.Y. City's tourism remains big business — bigger than ever, recession notwithstanding: Last year the Big Apple hosted 825 conventions (five more than '73), attended by 3,206,000 delegates (20,000 more than '73), who spent a very grand total of $405,300,000 (three mill more than '73) ... The total of all visitors — vacationers and conventioners, foreign and domestic — totaled more than 16,000,000 who spent $1,250,000,000 benefiting some 400,000 workers in the tourism industry who consequently ponied up some $100,000,000 in direct taxes.

Tourism is New York's second biggest industry — the garment-fashion industry is by far larger, collecting the major slice of the nation's multi-billion garment industry ... And 1975 is expected to top last year's anti-recession figures.

One fairly famed showbiz Boswell might've kept his job if he'd bothered to replace his departed teeth ... Sexagenarian (you can say that again) Helen Lawrenson, who lit up the ceiling 40 years ago when she wrote "Latin's Are Lousy Lovers," is sizzling the airwaves with her sex-and-tell interviews about old and (at least currently) dead lovers who included Conde Nast and Bernard Baruch: her posthumous bedside banter about Baruch rates him badly as a lover, less as a bestower of extramarital gifts. Helen finally stated flat out — on all shows — that he was a bigot; we heard her thus sour-grapes it — of course she was there as witness to Bernie's inner-sprung-secrets.

Lucciano Pavrotti, of The Met, and Bidu Sayao, erstwhile of the same opera troupe, celebrated birthdays in La Scala Restaurant where owners Arturo and Roberto backed up by all their waiters told the stars not to join in on "Happy Birthday" sung by "The La Scala Chorus."

Larry Spivak and Martha Rountree 30 years ago brought a little political quiz to TV to help promote the American Mercury magazine; it became more important than the magazine which Larry promptly sold; Larry and Martha together owned "Meet the Press" and "Leave It to the Girls"; and, as it comes to most partners, they split, each keeping the quiz preferred: Martha wanted "Leave It to the Girls," which folded not long thereafter; Larry's "Meet the Press" grew in importance as TV sets proliferated and politics suddenly became an immediately communicated parlor game ... Before long, Larry sold his quiz to NBC for a seven-figure very capital gain and remained as its well-paid host.

The shrewd and admirable Larry Spivak will retire this year, rich and heavy with cash, honors and respect, a gentleman of extended integrity; his replacement will be Bill Monroe of NBC's Washington staff, who has a most difficult TV act to follow ... "Meet the Press" began and continues as the best and most important political panel show in the land, conceived and executed with hard-hitting wisdom, a gutsy, fair, respected and highly successful career for Larry to fade out on. He'll be sorely missed on the longest running program in network TV.

Stepparents

They're called Stepparents. They arrive on the parental scene too late for the beginning of your life and too early for the end of it.

It's a blind date between a child whose "real father" was a cross between John Wayne and Big Bird ("real mother" a composite of Ann-Margaret and the Flying Nun) and a fledgling parent who visualized a grateful Cinderella. (Or Oliver).

It's a twilight zone where the Brady Bunch makes it look easy and the reality assures you it isn't.

It's an instant do-it-yourself parent kit stocked with hostility, bitterness, compromise, un-sureness, jealousy, pride, love and determination.

On a bad day it's slammed doors, whispers on the telephone, eyeball-to-eyeball confrontations and tearful "You're not my mother!" (Father!)

On a good day it's a gentle arm around your shoulder, a clumsy compliment, eyes that say I understand, and shared laughter that you thought would never come again.

All the ways of saying "I love you" for natural parents don't work for the stepparent.

"What time are you coming home?"

"Take your coat."

"No, you cannot go down the Ohio River on a raft."

"Go to bed. It's late."

It's a war and that's an invasion ... a crossing of the parent boundary line by a stepparent.

They constitute one of the largest unorganized groups in this country. They have no special interest groups or lobbyists working for them. They hold no regular meetings, nor do they pay dues. They conduct no bake sales and carry no membership cards in their billfolds. That alone should make them unique.

Heaven forbid that anyone think I am suggesting a special day to honor stepparents. On the contrary, I would like to suggest we do away with the word altogether. (Along with senior citizen, gross, brussel sprouts and All Sales Final!)

Parenthood is not necessarily a side effect from giving birth. Some are good at it and some are lousy. Real parent-hood is the one who is there to care.

From the middle of May to the middle of June, we honor Mothers and Fathers: I have a stepparent. It's either my mother or my father. I can't remember anymore which one it is.

(A.) You are ready to start cashing in on your education now. You are approaching the time of rewards. You are also on the verge of the time when school starts being fun. Don't throw all that promise away.

All of a sudden, school life opens up like a flower. School is THE place. You not only learn math and English and science and history but you also learn about life itself. This learning goes on through college. You learn how boys and girls get along together, how some people go on to be happy and important and successful, and how some drop out! You learn how the world works.

Don't drop out now! You have everything to win. Give school a chance. All your life you'll be glad you did.

TOO SHY: (Q.) I would like to ask Ann out but I am too shy to do it. How should I ask her out? Should I call her or ask her face to face? How can I stop being shy?

14 in Pennsylvania

(A.) Your shyness is not unusual for a 14-year-old boy. You can help overcome it by talking more with Ann when you see her at school. Let the dating wait for a few weeks, but talk with her at every opportunity.

Then call her on the phone a few times. By then you should have enough self-confidence to talk with her about going out. Do that on the telephone. It's easier that way.

LOAN: (Q.) I work after school. I like my boss's daughter. Last week she borrowed a dollar from me. She said her father would pay me back. Two days later, I asked him for it and he gave it to me.

But she got into trouble with him for borrowing the dollar. I apologized to her but I am still sorry. And I am afraid I have lost my chance of going out with her. What can I do?

Lots of Trouble in New York

(A.) If the girl said you should definitely go to her father for the dollar, then you conducted yourself correctly and have nothing to blame yourself for.

But you have learned that the borrowing and lending of money is a touchy business in which friendship and good-will often take a beating.

Go ahead and ask the girl for a date. This will tell her better than your apology could that your feeling for her is still positive.

A penetrating look at coronary heart disease — the nation's number one killer.

"I THINK I'M HAVING A HEART ATTACK!" is an important new book by Jerry Bishop, 20-year veteran reporter and senior member of The Wall Street Journal's staff covering science and medicine.

Written for the layman, it tells you what to do in the event of an attack, how to prepare for it, how to cope during and after an attack.

You'll learn about the probability of having a heart attack, the cholesterol controversy, the role of high blood pressure and obesity, the efforts to get victims to the hospital on time, new methods of treatment, the latest surgical techniques, the status of the heart transplant and the life one can lead after the heart attack has occurred.

"I THINK I'M HAVING A HEART ATTACK!" provides you with a clear understanding of angina pectoris, coronary thrombosis, renal hypertension, toxemia, and a host of other heart-attack related terms, all defined in a special Glossary developed by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Coronary heart disease is frightening and mysterious. "I THINK I'M HAVING A HEART ATTACK!" promotes understanding—the first step towards conquering this killer disease. Only $7.95 in hard cover.

Art as commodity: Investors vie for best available

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some people think Swiss bank accounts are the best hedge against inflation, others favor hoarding gold and silver, but art experts believe their business, with a billion dollar annual turnover, rates among the best.

It is not a new idea. In the Middle East, for example, fine carpets are traditional insurance against bad times and many a masterpiece of the weaver's art lies rolled up out of sight in that part of the world.

Banks, mutual funds, and foreign investors are going in for art investment to an extent that the great days of private collections are waning, according to the U. N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

John Richardson of the Knoedler Gallery in New York, is quoted:

"Today the private collector is the exception. Our regular sales are to other dealers, mutual funds, Swiss banks, Japanese corporations. You don't have real collections any more. What you have are bank vault holdings."

"Soon all the best art and antiques will be locked in bank vaults for capital appreciation and there will be nothing left to buy," UNESCO quotes a London collector.

But the cultural agency notes that many such investors put their art treasures on permanent loan to museums, a practice that enhances their value thereafter.

The merger of art and big business has brought an overall increase in art prices of 10 or 11 times in the past 20 years, UNESCO experts report. In the same period, industrial stocks increased by five times.

About 10 years ago, financiers and big firms began serious investment in art. For instance, the widely known merchant banking firm, Samuel Montagu, has an interest in a London picture dealer's business. Also in London, Rothschilds has a substantial holding in a gallery specializing in old masters—Colnaghi—and in Sotheby's auction house.

Baron Leon Lambert of the Banque Lambert in Brussels and his cousin, Baron Elie de Rothschild in Paris, founded the Artemis Fund in Luxembourg in 1970 to trade in art works. Artemis is the most successful of a dozen or more art investment firms that have sprung up. Another flourishing one is Modarco, registered in Panama with offices in London and Geneva.

Last December, the government-operated British Rail was reported to have acquired works by the Italian 18th Century masters, Giambattista Tiepolo and Giampolo Panini for about $470,000. A British Rail spokesman would not confirm the report, but he said:

"The board has decided that art works are a suitable hedge against inflation. We are taking expert advice from dealers."

Karl E. Meyer, whose writing on art is acknowledge authoritative, put the $1 billion-a-year estimate on the business in 1973. He said the boom began in 1952 when Cezanne's "Pommes et Biscuits" brought $94,281 at a Paris auction.

But the big breakthrough, he holds, came in 1961 when Rembrandt's "Aristotle Contemplating the Bust of Homer" went for $2.3 million in New York to the Metropolitan Museum. The Metropolitan doubled its own record when it bought Velasquez's "Portrait of Juan de Pareja" in London for $5.5 million in 1970.

Many such sales are private as, for instance, the purchase by the National Gallery in Washington of Leonardo da Vinci's portrait of "Ginevra De' Benci" from the reigning prince of Liechtenstein for more than $5 million in 1967.

There are still a few great private collectors. California industrialist Norton Simon bought a Raphael madonna for more than $3 million and J. Paul Getty, the oil tycoon, offered $4 million for a Titian.

Soaring prices are not limited to paintings and statuary. Last April, a 15th Century Chinese porcelain bottle sold at a London auction for $420,000 and last December, also in London, a Louis XVI desk brought $563,380—a record auction price for furniture.

Sotheby's—which owns Parke-Bernet in New York, the leading auction gallery in the United States—and Christie's give London a top spot in the art marts. Together, these houses took almost $323 million in the 1973-74 season compared to $255 million in 1972-73.

A story that intrigues art dealers and collectors is that of Jackson Pollock's "Blue Poles." Ben Heller was a friend of the American abstract expressionist and bought the painting from the artist in 1956 for what then was an impressive $32,000.

Heller sold "Blue Poles" to the National Gallery in Canberra, Australia, in 1973 for the equivalent of $2.7 million.

Second ordination front opens among Catholics

Among the most interested spectators at the recent ecclesiastical trial of an Episcopal priest charged with disobeying his bishop by allowing an improperly ordained woman to preside at Holy Communion were some Roman Catholic women.

The women believe that the outcome of the controversy in the Episcopal church could well have some bearing on what happens within Roman Catholicism.

Although no one is holding their breath in expectation of women's ordination to the Catholic priesthood, voices urging such a move are getting stronger and more militant.

One of the defense's witnesses in the Episcopal trial, for example, was Dr. Rosemary Radford Ruether, Roman Catholic theologian.

Mrs. Ruether testified that despite the official church's rejection of the idea of women priests, there was a growing consensus among Catholic theologians favoring ordination of women to the priesthood.

Pope Paul VI recently reiterated the church's official stand against the ordination of women noting that they did "not receive the call to the apostolate of the Twelve and therefore to the ordained ministries..."

"We cannot change the behavior of Our Lord nor His call to women," the Pope said, "but we must recognize and promote the role of women in the mission of evangelization and in the life of the Christian community."

While the Pope's statement seemed to many to even more firmly close the door on the issue of women's ordination, not everyone took it that way.

A group of women who have called a conference to plan strategy for women's ordination said they welcomed the statement.

"The Holy Father has invited the Church to continue reflecting on the scriptural basis for ministry, but only as it is interpreted in the living tradition of the Church," The November Conference will show just how alive that tradition really is."

According to those calling the November conference, which is expected to bring together some 1,000 to 700 participants, the meeting will focus "on the ordination of women to priesthood as epitomizing a long prevailing inequity."

"So long as women are excluded from ordination their participation in the sacramental life and ministry of the Church can only be a secondary and auxiliary, reflecting a theological view of them as diminished persons, deficient recipients of the sacraments of initiation," the sponsors said in a statement of philosophy.

In their commitment to action over rhetoric, the women could create the sharpest crisis in the Catholic church since the first winds of renewal that came with the Second Vatican Council a decade ago.

U.S. credibility gap at plateau

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the late 1960's, a number of Americansocial scientists began agonizing about the loss of credibility, legitimacy and authority by the national government.

What they were saying in their special jargon was that an increasing number of Americans (1) didn't believe what their government said was true, (2) didn't consider its actions to be legal, right or representative of their wishes and (3) didn't feel a need to do what the government asked or order them to do.

This obviously was a serious business. Many concluded that they were witnessing the collapse of viable government in the United States. But it didn't happen in the 1960's and it didn't happen in the 1970's, when some even worse things occurred. And, while some of the academics still hold that the nation is going to hell, there isn't anything like the chorus of doomsaying now that we heard a few years back.

Perhaps the social scientists who foresaw the abyss for this country were wrong—not about what was clearly taking place but what it would lead to. They followed the trend lines leading downward to sure anarchy and chaos, but overlooked the possibility that what they were observing was change, not disintegration.

Thus, it is possible that the decline in the government's credibility might have leveled off at a plateau of healthy skepticism about the statements and promises of those who hold or seek power. The feeling that government had cheated them might stop at a point where the public would demand that their leaders follow the rules and listen to the people.

And what appeared to be the most serious development, a growing disrespect for governmental authority, might just turn out to be a resurgence of two qualities that are supposed to be a priceless part of the American character — independent judgment and free choice.

None of this is to say that this country has reached some state of Nirvana in which all problems will be solved and the future will be safe and happy.

It just means that there has been some change and it might not be so bad.

The occasion for examining this possibility is the aftermath of the Mayaguez affair. It appears from the inexact measure of media and random public opinion that Americans largely approved of President Ford's action in using military force to free the boat and its crew.

It will take the testimony of scientific public opinion polling to verify the impression, but it seemed that the President, probably had the majority support of his constituents.

But that did not keep those who disagreed with Ford's action from speaking out in the most explicit terms. Some people, to judge by letters to newspapers here, frankly doubted the government's statement that the ship was peacefully plying the sea lanes and was set upon for no reason by "pirates."

Others sharply criticized the use of the Air Force and Marines without exhausting all diplomatic avenues, including intervention by the United Nations. And some questioned the loss of life and the efficiency of the military action itself.

These dissenters might be wrong, but if they are right they are doing the majority a greater service than themselves.

Design school graduates can sleep on diplomas

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The 450 graduates of the Rhode Island School of Design can sleep with their 1975 diplomas or even use them as briefcases.

They are stuffed pillows created by senior Ken Cooper, the latest in a line of unusual diplomas given School of Design graduates in addition to the paper diplomas handed out at commencement.

His creation was chosen last fall in a competition where the runnerup was a diploma printed on a T-shirt.

"RISD has been doing various diplomas for every year. I wanted to do a three-dimensional one as an art piece for each person," Cooper said Thursday as he began work on the last batch.

"Since I'm in textiles, I naturally thought in that direction. I decided a stuffed, quilted diploma would be very interesting," he said.

Last year, the graduates got large, appropriately inscribed cookie diplomas baked in school ovens. The ovens, used to cure ceramics, had some poisons in them—so eating the diplomas was discouraged.

Previous diplomas included one with a nude painted on it, one inscribed with pictures of a diploma written in the sky and another framed in neon lights.

Cooper, 22, of Trumbull, Conn. has worked on the project for several months with a budget of $1,000 to buy 190 yards of stuffing, 250 yards of heavy muslin and the 450 School of Design ribbons and seal pins to be attached to each pillow.

He gets three credits for the work which includes silkscreening each diploma and having the individual student's name printed on them.

"I made this diploma so the paper one would fit inside it if they choose to. My pet idea is to use it as a briefcase and carry your papers from job to job," Cooper said.

My sincere thanks to all who supported me from Barrett and Paradise in my successful campaign for school director.

Stephen Dellaria

STROUDSBURG — Stephen P. Dellaria, 63, of Stroudsburg R.D. 2 died Friday at his home.

Born in Italy, he was a son of the late Angelo and Rose Marie (Bellanca) Dellaria.

He was a resident of Monroe County most of his life and was employed by the Hughes Printing Co., East Stroudsburg for 44 years prior to his retirement in 1974.

He was a member of St. Matthews Roman Catholic Church in East Stroudsburg and the Father Butler Council 4084 Knights of Columbus.

He was a member of the International Typographical Union Local 943 of East Stroudsburg.

He is survived by three sisters, Miss Nancy Dellaria of East Stroudsburg, Mrs. Sadie Burnham of East Stroudsburg R.D. 2 and Mrs. Rose Falcone of Bangor; five brothers, Paul J., Michael and Charles Dellaria, all of East Stroudsburg and William J. of Fremont, Calif. and Angelo J. Dellaria of Stroudsburg; also several nieces and nephews.

Prayer services were held Monday at 10 a.m. in the Lanterman Funeral Home, 27 Washington St., East Stroudsburg with the Msgr. Thomas J. Cawley officiating.

Burial was in the Gates of Heaven section of the Laurelwood Cemetery, Stroudsburg.

Child test article published

EAST STROUDSBURG — The "Pennsylvania Assessment of Creative Tendency," authored by Professor Thomas J. Rookey of East Stroudsburg State College, has been selected for inclusion in the second edition of "Tests and Measurements in Child Development."

The collection is an expansion and revision of the first edition published in 1971 by Jossey-Bass, Inc. It presents reviews of child measures which have been judged as appropriate for psychologists, researchers and educators. The measures reviewed do not include those available from commercial test publishers.

The Rookey measure, the Pennsylvania Assessment of Creative Tendency (PACT), is a Likert Style attitude inventory where students agree or disagree with each item.

Conceptually, PACT is based upon three assumptions: first, there is such a thing as a student potential for creative output; second, there are events which affect creativity, and, third, there are characteristics which are common to creative production, whether the product be tangible or ideational.

To use or define a mode of measurement, creativity was defined as the conception by an individual of an event or relationship which, in the experience of that individual, did not previously exist. Extensive validity and reliability studies of the measure have been conducted since 1968. It has been used in virtually every state of the union and several other countries.

Charles Rode

WILKES-BARRE — Charles S. Rode, 50, of 35 N. Second St., Stroudsburg died Sunday in the Veterans Hospital in Wilkes-Barre. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Freida (VanWhy) Rode, at home.

Born in Stroudsburg, he was a son of Mrs. Helena (Rodenbaugh) Rode and the late Augustus D. Rode. He was a resident of Stroudsburg his entire life and served in the U.S. Army during World War II.

He was employed by the Shawnee Inn and Country Club for 29 years until his retirement seven months ago.

He was of the Methodist faith.

In addition to his widow and mother, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Bonnie Shook and Miss Joan Rode, both of Stroudsburg; a son, Charles A. Rode of Stroudsburg; five sisters, Mrs. Jane Montz of Kenilworth, N. J., Mrs. Teresa Freeze of Bath, Mrs. Margaret Godshall of Jim Thorpe, Mrs. Lena VanWhy of East Stroudsburg and Mrs. Mary Ponnett of Stroudsburg; three brothers, David Rode of Birch Acres, East Stroudsburg, Arthur Rode of Resida, Calif., and Edward Rode of Stroudsburg; also many nieces and nephews.

Hundreds observe Monroe Memorial Day ceremonies

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Children wave flags and dart into the street to see the fire engines, veterans dedicate their wreaths to those who went to war and a speaker encourages the crowd to turn their efforts toward solving domestic problems.

The morning air is cool and bright. People fill in the spaces between parked cars along the parade route from East Stroudsburg to Stroudsburg.

spilling onto the street with cameras ready to capture images of the military-like fanfare.

The annual Memorial Day parade in Monroe County Monday morning is a familiar scene — the peppy high school marching bands drumming down the street, the columns of fire fighters walking in tailored units.

But amid the celebration a somber mood lies among the marchers who represent the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and other veterans groups.

The procession of fire companies and trucks, ambulances, National Guardsmen, bands, twirlers and veterans rolls down North Courtland Street from East Stroudsburg High School.

While local police block traffic, veterans Jack Sandt, Richard Hower and Jack Muschuck place a wreath in front of the monument to Monroe County soldiers of World War I.

On a lawn-covered triangle of land on the East Stroud-burg side of the Interborough Bridge, guardsmen salute the soldiers with their guns, veterans and clergy with a prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance.

A crowd paralleling Main Street waits for the parade in Stroudsburg. Children watch the lines of armor and uniformed firemen quietly, but rush excitedly into the street when the fire trucks crawl up the slope from lower Main Street.

Marchers disband suddenly near noon and reassemble in Stroudsburg's Courthouse Square to listen to a Memorial Day address by Monroe and Pike County Judge James R. Marsh.

Faces without expression, veterans George Scoble, Rudolph Blitz, Ralph Dunlap and Richard Houser place four wreaths beneath the statue of a rifle-wielding soldier. In unison they salute a row of American flags as two buglers play taps, one near the veterans and another at a distance, the notes sounding as if they travel a great distance to reach the procession.

Standing on the steps of the courthouse, surrounded by flags, Cub Scouts and shade, Judge Marsh says the time has come to turn from foreign to domestic problems and return the country to the principles the forefathers fought for.

For the last 10 years groups whose participants claim they have instant solutions to America's problems have "taken over and pushed this country around," Marsh says.

"We have to take a second look at those who approve appointments when the Supreme Court bans prayers in schools. We have to begin to root out these kinds of appointments."

Although America aids other nations with medical and other supplies, our country is now pushed aside, he says.

Reciting portions of John McCrae's poem, "In Flanders Fields," Marsh calls on the people to take up the torch against the foe and strive for a better future at home.

Profitable summer predicted

Resort season opener termed successful

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — If the Memorial Day weekend is any indication of things to come, the Pocono vacation industry is in for a good summer.

Area residents, tourist attractions and parks reported business was generally good over the holiday weekend with only a few places experiencing a slump.

Most resorts reported business was as good or better as on previous Memorial Day weekends.

Joan Toms of The Antlers in Swiftwater said she had more vacationers than in previous years and had offered a special weekend vacation package.

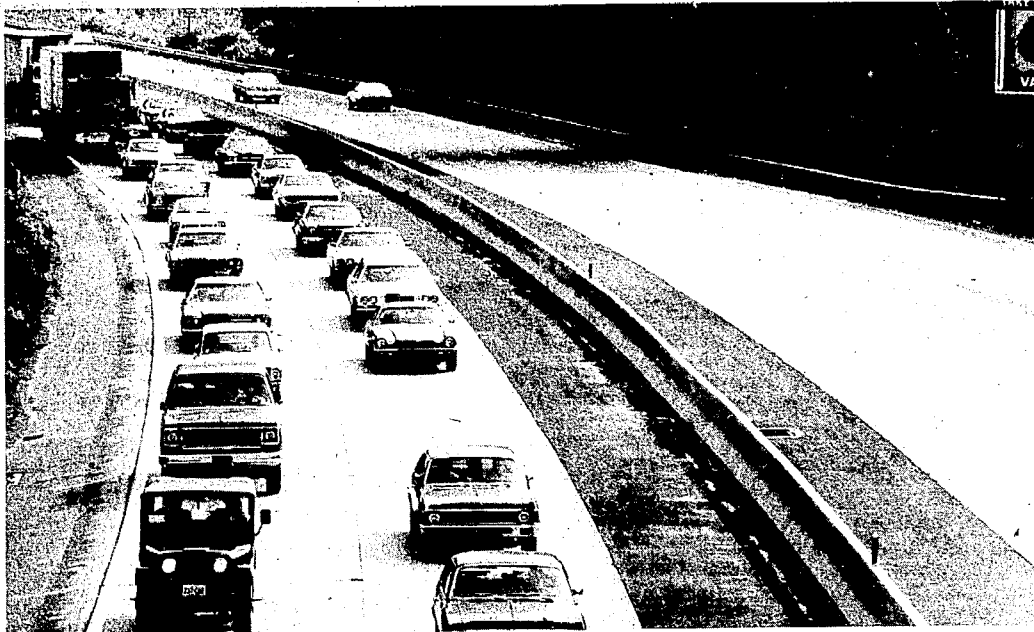

Carl Weiss of Brookview Manor in Canadensis said the Manor served "more people than usual."

Kathy Avery of Fernwood in Bushkill said weekend business was "very good" and that bad weather hadn't hurt business.

An employee of Henryville House in Henryville said the weekend was a little better than expected. "We're expecting a good summer. We have a lot of reservations now," she said.

Donna Myers of the Sheraton Pocono Inn said they were booked solid and far in advance of the weekend and are expecting a lot of people starting in June.

Some resorts received reservations far in advance, but others reported a flurry of requests close to the holiday weekend.

East-bound to New York and New Jersey, traffic indicates a successful weekend for tourism.

"These later requests are sort of a trend. We get a lot at the last minute," Mrs. Toms said.

Mrs. Claudia Luckey of Shawnee Inn at Shawnee-on-Delaware said she also received a lot of last minute calls but said they were full four to six weeks before the weekend.

Some vacationers made reservations for later in the summer before they left after their weekend stays.

"A lot made reservations for July before they left. I really think from the way people spoke we'll have a good summer," said Pearl Quinn of Monom-nock Inn in Mountain-home.

Ronald Logan, manager of Mount Airy Lodge in Mount Pocono, said the summer vacation business should be excellent as reservations are being received ahead of last year.

At least one area resort wasn't quite as fortunate this weekend. Thomas Blewitt, a manager at Mountain Lake House in Marshalls Creek, said they were about 60 per cent full but would have been busier if the weather had stayed hot.

He said he thinks business will pick up by August but vacation business is "down in the Poconos despite what the other guys say."

Tourist attractions reported similar busy weekends. An employee at Pocono Wild Animal Farm, Stroudsburg, reported business was better than usual and expected it to pick up even more in the summer.

Both Winona Falls and Bushkill Falls employees said they had busy weekends.

"We felt if the weather stayed hot we might not have a good weekend because then people don't want to walk around the falls. But we had a very, very good Sunday," said Marge Lav of Winona Falls.

John Lowris of Pocono Snake Country, Marshalls Creek, said his business was down about 40 per cent and blamed the decrease on several factors, including the weather, the economy and less advertising.

Two kept in hospital after crash

MILFORD — Two people were seriously injured after being thrown from a vehicle during a 10 p.m. Sunday accident.

Three others received minor injuries and one more was uninjured after the two-vehicle collision on U.S. 6 two miles west of Milford in Dingman Township.

St. Francis Hospital of Port Jervis reported Isabelle Coffey, 32, of New York City to be in fair condition Monday, although she was reported in critical condition Sunday night.

State police at Milford reported the woman had head injuries, internal injuries and a broken leg.

Charles Hipfzer, 36, of Star Route 1, Hawley was treated for head injuries and abrasions and released from the hospital. The other passenger of his truck, Edward Gold, 30, of Flushing, N.Y., was not injured.

Passengers in the other vehicle, Patrick Lee McMurray, 25, of 124 Philbert Ave., Ketter, Maine, and his wife Kathleen, 23, and son, Patrick Lee, Jr., one, received minor injuries.

McMurray was headed east on U.S. 6 in the right lane and Hipfzer was driving his truck in the passing lane, when McMurray made a left turn in front of Hipfzer. Hipfzer then struck McMurray.

Upon impact, Hipfzer and Coffey were thrown from the vehicle. Hipfzer landed on the road and Coffey, after going through the windshield rolled under the truck and was dragged about 100 feet.

The Hipfzer truck then continued off the highway over an embankment and down a hill into a clump of trees, where it stopped.

Tpr. Ronald Souchak of Milford, was the investigating officer.

Blue Ridge douses fire

SAYLORSBURG — Blue Ridge Hook and Ladder responded to a fire alarm shortly after noon Sunday at the home of Jerry Weber, Saylorburg.

Fire Chief George Kitchen said a partition inside the house had caught fire when pipes were being soldered. He said 17 men and five pieces of equipment were on the scene 20 minutes putting out the fire.

Police blotter

Three vehicles collide

SCOTRUN — A truck driver, Robert R. Trier of Des Moines, Iowa will be charged with reckless driving by state police at Swiftwater after he caused a three-vehicle crash at 2 p.m. Monday.

The accident occurred at exit 44 of I-80 eastbound on the ramp in Pocono Township.

All the people injured were treated and released at the General Hospital of Monroe County. Total damages came to $2,100.

A stationwagon driven by Russell DeLong, 40, of Catasauqua, was entering I-80 eastbound at exit 44 when a second vehicle, driven by Joseph Scalice, 52, of Brooklyn, N.Y. was in the passing lane approaching the exit.

The truck, also in the eastbound passing lane, struck the rear of the Scalice vehicle, causing it to strike the right side of DeLong's vehicle.

The two cars then continued on and struck a bridge. The truck continued to the eastbound berm.

Driver charged

MARSHALLS CREEK — Gerald McAndrew, 17, of South Amboy, N.J. was charged with reckless driving after a 6:45 p.m. accident Saturday on L.R. 45017, about six miles north of Marshalls Creek in Middle Smithfield Township.

McAndrews was southbound on L.R. 45017, negotiating a right curve when he left the road, severed a tree in half and stopped.

Damage to the car was estimated at $1,000. He and a passenger, Mike Twigle of Parlin, N.J. were treated and released at the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Driver charged

EASTON — A Bangor man was charged with drunken driving after he ran off township route 165 near Wind Gap at 8:20 p.m. Sunday and hit a bridge.

Edward A. Kluska, 53, of 8 N. Main St., Bangor was not injured. He was arraigned before District Magistrate Sherwood Grigg and released on his own recognizance.

Police estimated the car had $400 damages.

Suicide listed

STROUDSBURG — Deputy Coroner Frank Lanterman ruled Stephen P. Dellaria of Stroudsburg R.D. 2 committed suicide Friday by shooting himself.

Wayne woman hurt

HONESDALE — A Honesdale woman is in guarded condition in the intensive care unit of Wayne Memorial Hospital after a 7:35 a.m. Sunday accident on Route 6 in Texas Township, three-tenths of a mile east of Honesdale.

Lawrence W. Brundage, 27, of Seelyville was driving east on Rte. 6 when he moved into the west lane and hit a vehicle driven by Cynthia Ward, 18, of Honesdale. R.D. 4 headed in the opposite direction.

Brundage, Ward and a passenger in Ward's car, Gary Gresh, 20, of Honesdale were all taken to Wayne Memorial Hospital by Hessling Ambulance. Brundage and Gresh were treated and released.

One-car mishap

EAST STROUDSBURG — Bruce Nozier, 25, of Roosevelt Street, East Stroudsburg fell asleep at the wheel of his car at 1 a.m. Sunday and struck a tree on South Courtland Street.

He was treated and released from the General Hospital of Monroe County. Police estimated damages to his car at $1,200.

Expensive wave

EAST STROUDSBURG — Waving to a friend on South Courtland Street cost James Hopkins of Broad Street, Stroudsburg $1,400.

That was the amount of damages to his car incurred when he struck a utility pole at 1:37 a.m. Saturday. Police said there was no damage to the pole.

Coroner rules on death

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Coroner Daniel G. Warner ruled the death Friday of Floyd A. Schuler, 77, of Stroudsburg R.D. 5 a suicide, strangulation by hanging.

Truck site opposition to meet

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Township residents who oppose the location of a truck stop near Mountainview Drive have scheduled a meeting for 7 p.m. tonight at the Clearview Elementary School auditorium.

According to meeting organizer Dennis Douds, all township residents concerned about the proposed truck stop can discuss future protest plans and how they will be organized at that time.

Residents are protesting a proposal by Consolidated Freightways Inc. to locate a truck terminal near Mountainview Drive and Wigwam Park Road.

'Elitists' blamed for delay

Labor supports Tocks for jobs

TREVOSE — Representatives from organized labor, mostly from New Jersey, strongly backed the proposed Tocks Island Dam project at a public hearing, noting it would create jobs and provide environmental safeguards in the Delaware River Valley.

Labor leaders testified at a two-day public information hearing on the Comprehensive Study of the Tocks Island Lake Project and Alternatives. Congress mandated the $1.5 million study which must be completed by the end of July.

Charles H. Marcante, New Jersey AFL-CIO president, supported the dam project and said it was being delayed for the "aesthetic enrichment of a socially secure and elitist group."

One labor spokesman maintained that 26,000 construction jobs and 14,000 industry-related jobs would be created for every $1 billion spent on construction of the project.

Kenneth Pyle, a spokesman for the Society for Environmental and Economic Development (SEED) — a labor and industry coalition — said he felt the dam was the best way to meet the economic and environmental problems facing New Jersey. He described alternative proposals to the dam as hastily conceived and largely untested.

Paul Felton, representing the Water Resources Assn. of the Delaware River Basin, questioned whether environmentalists would be happy if the Tocks project was halted.

He argued that environmentalists might also oppose smaller tributary dams and reservoirs now being proposed as alternatives to the Tocks Island Dam. He wondered why Monroe County favored three smaller dams as an alternative to Tocks Island.

Monroe County Commissioner Nancy Shukaitis responded that the Tocks proposal does not consider the additional burden that would be placed on local police and fire services because of the dam.

"Local people cannot be responsible for services."

She noted that several Washington policies now being developed favor repairing old land wounds before starting future projects.

Stroudsburg 880-relay team: State champs

STATE COLLEGE — Stroudsburg's Craig Price, Rod Baechtold, Rick Anglemeyer and Bob Tilwick combined their efforts to produce a state championship relay-team Saturday.

Price, Baechtold, Anglemeyer, and Tilwick polished off the rest of the Class B 880-relay field with ease enroute to a first place finish in the 49th annual PIAA Track and Field Championships.

The four Mountie sprinters were clocked in 1:31.1, just a half-second off the state Class B record of 1:30.6 and six-tenths of a second faster than their previous best of 1:31.7 attained in the Emrey Relays earlier this season.

Price, Baechtold, Anglemeyer, and Tilwick turned in the best time in the Class B time trials on Friday with a 1:31.9 and followed that effort up on Saturday with an outstanding display of team balance.

Price got the Mounties off to a good start when he ran the first leg of the race in 22.9 seconds and Baechtold widened the lead with a 22.4 second leg.

Anglemeyer completed his leg in 22.6 seconds and Tilwick anchored the race with a 22.2 second-sprint as the Mounties finished about 15 yards ahead of second place Selingsgrove.

The 880-relay championships enabled Price, Baechtold, Anglemeyer, and Tilwick to become only the second group of Stroudsburg athletes who have ever finished first in a state meet.

Mark Adams, who won the 440-yard dash, is the only other Stroudsburg state champion.

Although the 880-relay team was the highlight of the day for the Mounties, three other Stroudsburg athletes and one East Stroudsburg performer also placed in the top five finalists.

Sprinter Jim Kresge of East Stroudsburg finally saw the end of his unbeaten streak in the 220 and 440 but still managed to finish fourth in the 440-yard dash.

Kresge, who was eliminated in the semi-finals of the 220 on Saturday morning, came back in the afternoon to finish in a fourth-place tie with Dan Hartman of Selingsgrove in the 440 with a time of 51.3 seconds.

Kresge finished second in his heat of runners, behind winner Jay Shofestall of Clarion Limestone, who turned in a time of 50.4 seconds, but ended up only in a tie for fourth when three runners from the first heat posted faster times.

Although Kresge was grouped in the fastest heat, his field may have been hampered by a cross-wind which stirred up just prior to the race.

Stroudsburg, which finished in a fourth place tie in the team standings with 12 points, had a third, fourth, and fifth place finisher in addition to the winning 880-relay team.

Senior Frank Bell came up with a throw of 57-4 to finish third in the shot put behind Bob Carr of Union, who had a 57-7½; and Marlin VanHorn of Selingsgrove who had a 57-4½.

Bell led the shot put field until Carr and VanHorn came up with better throws on their final attempts of the afternoon.

It marked the second straight year that Bell has finished third in the shot put.

Teammate Tom Blair, who finished fourth in the discus last year, finished fourth again Saturday with a distance of 157-8.

Morris Pagni of Pen Argyl, who upset Blair in the District 11 championships, finished fifth with a distance of 155-5.

Ben Myers of Solanco won the event with a toss of 158-8.

Sophomore Tom DeSchriver of Stroudsburg finished fifth in the two-mile despite setting a new school record. DeSchriver was clocked in 9:38.2 to shatter his old school mark of 9:40 set earlier this season.

Cliff Wilmer of Solanco won the two-mile with a time of 9:31.3.

Four other area athletes who reached the semi-finals failed to place within the top five finishers.

Cheryl Burris of Stroudsburg finished ninth in the long jump with a leap of 16-7. East Stroudsburg's Dawn Eilenberger was eliminated in the semi-final heats of the 80-yard hurdles, while Pen Argyl's Rich "Bubba" Ede and Pam Serfass failed to place in the shot put and high jump respectively.

Jenkins finishes second in IC4A

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Lenny Jenkins of East Stroudsburg State College closed his collegiate career by being the highest college division finisher in the IC4A Outdoor Track and Field Championships Saturday with a second in the triple jump.

Jenkins leaped 50-1½ to rank as the runnerup in the field of the East Coast's top triple jumpers. The event was won by Bill Goodman of Maryland at 50-3.

The distances in the triple jump were sub-par because of a hard runway which didn't permit the competitors to get any bounce off of it.

Jenkins, whose career best was 51-7½, made his best jump on his first attempt to take the lead. Goodman took over on his second try and neither leader improved the rest of the way.

John Jones of William and Mary was third at 50-¼ with John Gilbert of Lafayette fourth at 48-11.

ESSC's other entrant in the IC4A meet, sophomore Pete Heesen was seventh in the 3000-meter steeplechase in a time of 9:10.2.

Heesen was among the leaders on the first lap, but hit a hurdle and fell down on the second lap and was never in contention again.

Miguel Roche of Rutgers won the steeplechase in a meet record time of 8:41. There were only two other runners under nine minutes.

Heesen will leave today for Sacramento Calif. where he will compete in the NCAA Division II Track and Field Championships later this week.

Under the NCAA five-year rule, Jenkins is ineligible for the national championships.

Allen stars in lacrosse

CARLISLE — Six East Stroudsburg State College women and a Pocono Mountain High School physical education teacher competed in the 44th annual national tournament of the United States Women's Lacrosse Association at Carlisle.

In the Class A division, Philadelphia defeated the South I team, 7-5 to win the national championship.

Beth Allen of Mount Pocono, a physical education teacher at Pocono Mountain High School was the second leading scorer in the tournament with eight goals for the second place South I team.

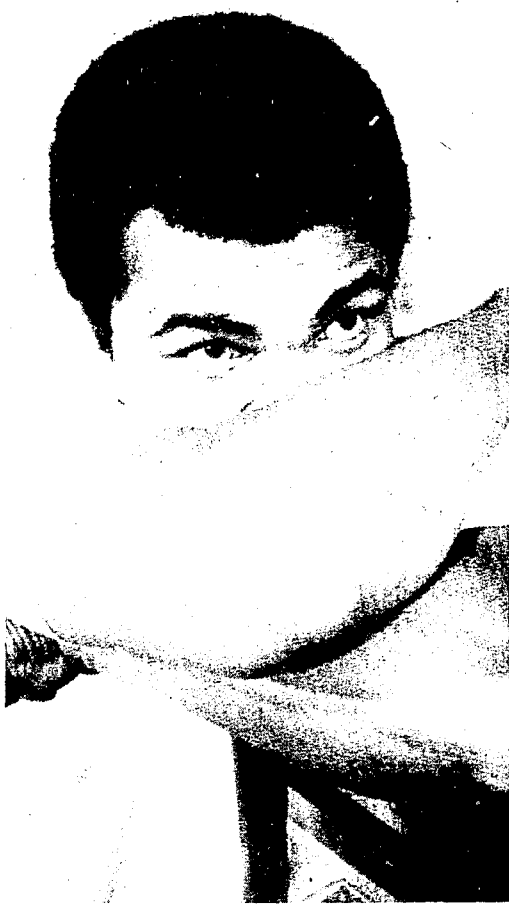

Following tournament play, Allen was named as the left-attack wing on the United States lacrosse team which will tour England and Scotland for six weeks next fall. It was the fourth straight year Allen has been selected to the team.

In the college division, ESSC's Lynn Hitchner scored four goals to help lead Philadelphia College III team to second place in Division C with a 4-1 record.

ESSC teammates Dolores "Bee" Donato at centerpoint and goalie Nancy Brun played on the same team with Hitchner.

Bobbi Spillane, who played with an injured knee, and Candy Stefani played defense on the Philadelphia College IV team which finished with a 2-2-1 record. ESSC's Jan Hilborn was the team's top scorer.

ESSC player of the year Barb Heavy did not play in the tournament due to a sudden death in her family.

Flyers can clinch 'the Cup' tonight

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Through the haze of the heavy fog expected to settle in Memorial Auditorium once again tonight, the weary Philadelphia Flyers will have a special beacon of light to see them safely through to the end of their hazardous eight-month journey.

"We can see the end and we'll give it everything we got," said Dave Schultz, whose biggest day of the season Sunday with two goals lifted the Flyers to within one game of completing a successful defense of their Stanley Cup championship against the Buffalo Sabres. "When we skate on the ice, we'll be thinking 'only 60 minutes more,' then it will be 40 minutes, and then we'll see our season dwindling to just a few minutes. It should help us knowing what's at the end. When you have a goal, you don't mind a little inconvenience."

Gary Dornhoefer, another goal-scorer in Sunday's 5-1 victory that gave Philadelphia a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven finals, agreed that fatigue no longer could be a factor, although this will be the 107th game for the Flyers since they opened training camp last September.

"We've come too far now to say we're tired," Dornhoefer said Monday before the team flew here. "The two games we played in Buffalo last week were the hardest I ever played in my life. I was drained, physically and mentally. In the overtime game, half the time I didn't know where I was."

"Maybe the conditions will be as bad tomorrow night, but we're one win away. Any individual who can't come up with a super effort now, I feel sorry for him."

It was suggested that the Flyers could afford to lose a game since a seventh game would be played in the Spectrum, where Buffalo has failed to win in five years.

"I don't think anyone wants to wait till the seventh game," Dornhoefer replied. "What is the old saying, you don't leave for tomorrow what you can do for today. In a seventh game, anything can happen. We're ready to work as hard as we can tomorrow and end it there."

The Sabres, despite their precarious position, have not had their spirits blunted and point out they have yet to lose a playoff game at home.

"I definitely think all you people should make reservations to be back here Thursday," was the advice offered by Coach Floyd Smith immediately after Sunday's dismal failure.

Unser's Indy 500 victory marred by Sneva's crash

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Bobby Unser was posted Monday as official winner of the rain-shortened Indianapolis auto classic, but the joy was tempered a bit by the news that driver Tom Sneva was listed in serious condition with burns suffered in Sunday's aborted race.

"That was the worst accident I've ever seen," said the veteran Bobby U., who also won the Indy 500 in 1968. USAC officials said Sneva's condition was listed as serious only because he still was in the intensive care unit of Methodist Hospital. The Spokane, Wash., junior high school principal went into the wall after his wheels brushed rookie Eldon Rasmussen's car on the 126th lap.

"It looked a fireball caroming of the wall," said Unser, who had to dodge flaming debris.

Sneva suffered third degree burns on his fingers and hands, first and second degree burns of the face, chest and arms. He also inhaled some of the flames.

Unser's victory sidetracked the legend of A.J. Foyt for at least another year. The Albuquerque, N.M., driver said he was confident there would be no protests after he was declared winner of the race that terminated after 174 laps.

The official change in the standings moved Bill Vukovich up from eighth to sixth place. Rookie Bill Puterbaugh was pushed back a notch to seventh and George Snider dropped a peg to eighth.

"We started the race as an underdog," said Unser when he returned to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Monday for publicity photos. "There wasn't too much mention of us in the media, but it really didn't bother us that much."

Under said he knew "it would take a smart race to win and that's what we had in mind. Gordon Johncock took off hard at the start and I didn't want to do that. He went out after eight laps. I was dropping behind him when I heard something pop in his car and saw fire come out of his exhaust pipes."

Johnny Rutherford still believes he could have caught Unser if the race had gone the full 500 miles.

"We had enough fuel to go the distance," said the 1974 Indy winner. "I know Bobby and I would have had a real race."

Shrugging his shoulders, Rutherford then said softly: "But that's racing, I guess."

"There's no way Rutherford could have caught us," said car builder Dan Gurney, whose Eagle-Oggy carried Unser to victory. "Prior to the rain, we felt in the strongest position to win and we were capable of beating off any challenge."

"I think it would have been a great finish for the three of us," said Foyt. "It might have been the race of the century."

Chief steward Tom Binford said he was pleased with Sunday's event and was satisfied it was a fair race.

Binford admitted that there were a few seconds delay in dropping the red flag to end the race, "but it was unavoidable since it took that long to pass on my signal to the chief starter."

There were no protests over the official placings. Jim Gilmore, the millionaire Michigan industrialist who backs Foyt's racing program, was at the USAC Speedway offices at 7:30 a.m., but it was not to lodge any complaints.

Summer foes may melt Snow

The Lehigh Valley Soccer League turned out to be an absolute pushover for the Pocono Snow this season. Twelve straight league opponents tried and failed to defeat the Snow.

Now, things are about to get a lot tougher. The Snow has lined up a slate of nine summer exhibitions and not a single opponent can be labeled "easy." Before August is over, the Snow will have faced a first division European team, the Central Pennsylvania conference champions, and the first place team in the United Soccer League of Pennsylvania.

The summer exhibition schedule begins with a 2:30 p.m. home contest against Easton United this Sunday.

Easton is a newly-formed team, which has lost only once since April and may be admitted to the Lehigh Valley League this fall. Several second division Philadelphia area teams are among its victims.

The schedule for the remainder of June doesn't get easier for the Snow, as a pair of games against Lancaster United and one contest against United Penn are on tap.

The second contest against Lancaster United, which went undefeated enroute to the championship of the Central Pennsylvania American Soccer Conference, will take place on June 22 as part of the Laurel Blossom Festival. The Snow will get its first look at Lancaster on June 8 in an away game.

The game against United Penn, set for June 29, is one of two games the Snow will play as part of the Bavarian Festival tournament in Barnesville.

The Snow's second opponent at Barnesville will be Roslyn on July 13. Ten teams are entered in the festival's annual tournament.

Probably the toughest part of the Snow's summer schedule will take place during July and August when the Snow takes on Reading Evergreen twice and Memmingen Germany once.

Memmingen Germany, which Snow coach Karl Dickl rates as the highlight of the summer schedule, will visit the Snow for a 2:30 p.m. game on August 3.

Memmingen competes in the first division of German soccer and as such will probably be the most highly skilled team the Snow will face.

Reading Evergreen will host the Snow on July 20 and play a return match in Stroudsburg on August 24.

Reading, which Dickl says is "virtually unbeatable at home," has its own stadium and club facilities in Reading and attracts large crowds to all its games.

The current team is an offshoot of the old Reading Americans, which Dickl played for in the early 1960s. Coincidentally, Evergreen coach Herbert Schubert and Snow coach Dickl were once teammates on the Americans ball club.

An away match against United Penn will close out the Snow's summer schedule on August 31.

More opponents possible

Dickl is still hoping to add several other opponents to the summer schedule. Current possibilities include the Delaware Wings of the American Soccer League and Elizabeth, N.J., which faced the United States Olympic team one day after the Snow.

Dickl also anticipates several personnel changes throughout the summer. Pete Shaub has left the Snow to return to active duty in the Marine Corps.

Schaub's spot on the roster is expected to be filled by ex-East Penn League Most Valuable Player Tom Panic. Panic starred at Freedom and is currently the top scorer for Navy.

One other temporary change involves Dickl himself. Dickl will turn over the coaching reins to Manny Tavormina for a portion of the summer while concentrating on his doctorate.

Bullpen fails to preserve lead

Royals rally to upend Yanks, 6-5

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Frank White's squeeze-bunt single scored Jim Wohlford from third base with one out in the 11th inning Monday night, lifting the Kansas City Royals to a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

George Brett led off the 11th by reaching base on an error by pitcher Sparky Lyle. Wohlford then bunted into a forceout but Fran Healy, who singled home the tying run in the ninth, followed with a check-swing single, sending Wohlford to third.

Dave Pagan replaced Lyle and gave up the squeeze bunt single to White.

Marty Pattin, 2-0, the third Kansas City pitcher, was the winner, allowing only one hit in three innings.

The Royals tied the score at 5-5 in the ninth inning when they routed relievers Dick Tidrow and Lyle for two runs on four hits. Harmon Killebrew started the rally with a single and after one out, Cookie Rojas bunted for a hit, moving pinch-runner Tony Scott to second. George Brett singled to score Scott, and after Buck Martinez hit into a forceout, Healy singled to score Rojas with the tying run.

The Yankees had built a 5-1 lead mainly on the hitting of Chris Chambliss, who had two doubles and a single and scored three runs.

After the Orioles scored in the top of the fourth on a walk to Bobby Grich and the first of two doubles by Brooks Robinson, Phil Garner hit a solo homer in the bottom of the inning for a 5-1 lead.

A walk to Grich, a single by Don Baylor and Robinson's second double leading off the sixth got Baltimore two runs and chased Oakland starter Ken Holtzman. Jim Perry came on and served up a two-run homer to pinch hitter Jim Northrup to tie the score.

White Sox, 4-2
MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Back-to-back home runs by Bucky Dent and Brian Downing with two out in the ninth inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 4-2 victory Monday over the Milwaukee Brewers as Jim Kaat won his eighth game of the season.

The loss was the sixth in a row for the Brewers and eighth in their last nine games.

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Oscar Gamble singled in two runs in the first inning and Charlie Spikes added a key solo homer in the fifth inning Monday to lead the Cleveland Indians to a 9-3 triumph over the California Angels.

Left-hander Fritz Peterson benefited from Cleveland's 13-hit attack, scattering seven hits to go the distance and raise his record to 4-4. It was his 18th career victory in 25 decisions against California.

Red Sox, 7-5
ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Bernie Carbo hit a three-run homer and Dwight Evans added a two-run blast Monday night to power the Boston Red Sox to a 7-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The loss was the Rangers' fourth straight.
Evans homered in the eighth to break a 5-5 tie after Carbo had given the Red Sox the lead for the first time with a three-run blast in the seventh.

Rick Wise, who didn't walk a batter, gave up 10 hits in earning his fifth win against four losses but he needed relief help from Bill Lee and Dick Drago.

Tigers, 6-2
DETROIT (UPI) — Dan Meyer hit a two-run homer and Aurelio Rodriguez drove in three runs with a homer and double, backing rookie Vern Riffe's six-hit pitching as the Detroit Tigers snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak 6-2 Monday night.

Minnesota reliever Bill Campbell's first start since August 1973 was a limited success as he struck out nine and gave up only five hits in seven innings.
But one of those hits was Meyer's fourth homer of the season, after Gary Sutherland walked with one out in the first. Rodriguez hit his fifth homer of the season with one out in the second to make Campbell winless in three decisions.

Phils snap losing streak; Mets down Dodgers, 6-3

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Larry Bowa singled with two out in the 11th inning and then scored the only run of the game on a pair of San Francisco errors Monday night as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the San Francisco Giants 1-0.

The victory ended a six-game Philadelphia losing streak and a seven-game winning streak for the Giants.

Tug McGraw, who pitched the last 3-13 innings in relief of starter Wayne Twitchell, picked up his third victory of the season. Ed Halicki, who retired 21 straight batters from the third through the 10th inning, was the loser.

Bowa singled with two out in the 11th and took second when Halicki threw wild trying for a pickoff at first. When third baseman Ed Goodson let Dick Allen's grounder get through him for an error, Bowa scored.

Mets, 6-3
NEW YORK (UPI) — Wayne Garrett hit a pinch hit three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning Monday to give the New York Mets a 6-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and hand Andy Messersmith his first loss of the season after seven victories.

Mike Phillips started the rally with a one-out triple to left-center and Jerry Grote was given an intentional pass before Garrett batted for winning pitcher Tom Seaver. Garrett unloaded his second homer of the season into the rightfield mezzanine on a 1-0 pitch.

Seaver allowed only five hits and struck out four in raising his record to 6-4.

The Mets had taken a 3-1 lead in the third on solo homers by Del Unser and Ed Kranepool.

Pirates, 10-2
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Bruce Kison fired a five-hitter and Willie Stargell contributed a two-run triple and a homer Monday night to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10-2 rout of the Houston Astros.

Kison raised his record to 4-1 as he struck out four and walked six. J.R. Richard was tagged with the defeat.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the second when Al Oliver singled, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Bill Robinson's two-out single. But the Astros tied it the next inning when Greg Gross singled, moved up as Roger Metzger walked and came across on Bob Watson's single.

Supertankers can't use it

Shippers wary of Suez Canal

LONDON (UPI) — The shipping world is not all that excited about the scheduled reopening of the Suez Canal June 5, at least not yet.

There are two main reasons: Supertankers that didn't exist when the canal was closed in 1967 now carry oil from Arabia to the West. They are too big to fit through the waterway.

The cost of using the canal, with tolls, war risk insurance, and security considerations, may be more expensive than continuing to use the route around the Cape of Good Hope.

To make matters worse, shipping rates are currently depressed by an overabundance of tankers.

A survey by Lambert Brothers Shipping Ltd., predicted that the reopening of the canal would not have a major impact on international sea trade, except for general and nonbulk cargo.

All shippers agree that there will be no sudden rush of ships through the 102-mile waterway that links East and West.

The canal before its closure could take ships only up to 70,000 tons. Now there are 480 supertankers of 200,000 tons and more.

With a world surplus of tankers, only the fittest—meaning biggest—are going to survive. The smaller ones are becoming obsolete and are in many cases ready for the scrap heap.

Egyptian authorities plan to widen and deepen the canal to accommodate bigger ships. But this will take several years.

The immediate question is what the tolls and insurance fees are going to be for using the canal in the midst of an uneasy truce in the Middle East. The Suez Canal authority has said it will announce new canal tolls Sunday.

A spokesman for the British Chamber of Shipping said until the tolls are announced and the condition of the canal itself is known, it is impossible to give a definite answer as to likely shipping movements.

Lloyd's of London, the vast marine insurance complex, is not yet even sure what the insurance rates will be.

"Underwriters are evaluating the position," a spokesman said, "and there is a likelihood that war risk rates will be higher than usual," varying according to the cargo.

A British Petroleum Co. spokesman said the fact that no firm peace agreement has been signed is bound to weigh on the cost of insurance for ships using the Suez route.

Under the current cease-fire, Israeli troops and tanks are deployed within easy striking distance of the canal. Its capture would certainly be one of their first objectives in a new outbreak of fighting as it was in 1956 and 1967.

"Shipping companies faced a serious problem in the 1956 Middle East conflict," a British Chamber of Shipping spokesman said. "But in the 1967 war, they were able to put the earlier lessons to good use in diversifying routes."

Certainly there will be some shipping returning to the canal, mainly because it is the quickest way to get from the Mediterranean Sea to the Indian Ocean, or vice versa. The Cape route adds 14 days.

The Lambert Brothers survey estimated the maximum amount of shipping capable of diversion through the reopened canal at between 122 million and 169 million tons, or 3.7 to 5.1 per cent of total seaborne trade.

Baffling Lebanon problem division among religions

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Government is a fragile thing in Lebanon, the Middle East's closest thing to a neutral nation, the wonder being that it can exist at all. Since July, 1973, four governments have fallen on the same or related issues and for the same reasons.

Under the rules, there can be no strong government in half-Christian and half-Muslim Lebanon.

Hence no government can deal effectively with the country's most pressing problem—the animosity between the 15,000 Palestinian guerrillas and armed groups, mostly Christian, which resent their near autonomy and the fact their raids against Israel draw sharp Israeli retaliatory response against Lebanon.

In mid-April, Lebanese Phalangists, a political party with a private militia of 5,000 well-armed men, attacked a busload of Palestinians returning from a rally.

By official estimate 300 persons died in subsequent battles and on May 5 Premier Rashid al Solh resigned under criticism that his government had been ineffective in halting the fighting.

In 1973 two other premiers resigned for the same reason and in 1974 another fell after abortive attempts to disarm Lebanon's private armies.

Largest of these belongs to the Phalangists led by their founder, Pierre Gemayel, 70-year-old veteran who started out fighting the French before Lebanese independence.

A second army is led by another rightwing leader, Camille Chamoun, whose forces are said to total about 1,000 men armed with small and medium weapons.

In gun-carrying Lebanon, 50,000 guns are said to be in the hands of civilians, or one gun for every .0 persons.

The weakness of Lebanese governments is traceable to political rules peculiar to Lebanon.

Lebanon's president must be a Maronite Christian. At present he is Suleiman Frangieh. The premier must be a Sunni Moslem and the speaker of the national assembly a Shiite Moslem. Other offices are apportioned rigidly among a total of 17 religious groups participating in Lebanese public life.

Included among the various groups are the Maronites, Greek Orthodox, Armenian Orthodox, Greek Catholics, Sunni Moslems, Shiite Moslems, Druse Moslems and others.

In general, the Christians oppose the Palestinian presence, and the Moslems, especially leftwingers, support it.

Although in theory the two sides have reached a cease-fire, violent incidents have continued.

Contributing to the tension also has been a series of Israeli raids across the border.

The field features team-mates Al Unser and Mario Andretti in the front row for this exciting $50,000 event. First Purolator 5000 Qualifying Heat starts at 12 noon.

Tickets are available at raceway, by mail or in person.

Officials fear Communist influence in labor unions

By RICHARD F. JANSSEN

Dow Jones-Ottaway News
LONDON — From his comfortably modern office in a villa-like stone building, Kenneth Gill gazes pensively out at a quiet suburban green and worries aloud about Britain's chronic labor difficulties.

It is not excessive wage demands or disruptive strikes that bother the personable 47-year-old. His concern is that British workers lack class consciousness. He finds that he must really work to stir up resentment against the "encrusted class," or those who come from the right families, attend the right schools and run the nation's industries.

Gill's views are not surprising, for he is a Communist labor leader — the general secretary of the white-collar section of the 1.5 million-member Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, or AUEW. He is also the first Communist party member to win a seat on the Board of the Trades Union Congress, the British equivalent of the AFL-CIO.

Not so long ago, avowed Communists like Gill would have had little hope of rising beyond low-echelon positions on the fringes of the British trade-union movement.

Their recent ascent to trade-union leadership here is sparking mounting concern and controversy on this side of the Atlantic because of what some western analysts argue is a concerted, three-tier Communist campaign aimed at gaining:

— More influence inside the trade unions of Western Europe;

— More cooperation between Communist-led and non-Communist-led unions in Western Europe;

— More contact between Western Europe's unions and those of Eastern Europe, including the Soviet Union.

"All the initiative, all the alertness is from the Soviet side, so it must be part of overall Soviet strategy," worries a labor expert at a North American embassy here.

He reasons that the Russians' "Lack of success at direct political influence in the west has led them to work through trade unions."

The Russians' own propaganda supports the view that even in the U.S., they would like to push detente at the trade-union level.

"Normalization" of U.S. - Soviet relations is widely supported by the U.S. Working class movement," Radio Moscow said recently, contending that many working people "reject the line of the reactionary trade-union leader George Meany, who has tried to bring back the spirit of the cold war."

The AFL-CIO has been cool to Communist unions since shortly after World War II. In February, the labor federation's executive council at its Bal Harbour, Fla., meeting expressed "disgust" at the "fraternization" of Western European and Communist trade unions.

As long as Meany continues to head the AFL-CIO, trade union sources expect the Soviets to concentrate their efforts in Western Europe, where the reception has been more cordial: "We have our objective," a British Trades Union Congress source says, "of getting much closer to them."

The extent to which Communists are building a power base inside Western Europe's trade unions cannot be known with certainty, analysts concede.

There are probably more Communist-linked leaders than care to admit the fact, they explain, and, because membership figures are far from reliable, accurate proportions cannot be determined.

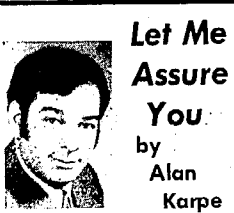

While the Communist Confederation Generale Do Travail (CGT) is unquestionably the biggest union in France, for example, estimates of its membership range from one million to 2.4 million.

What is clear, though, is that Communist unions are trying to enhance their strength by working more closely with non-Communist unions.

According to one Communist

Labor leader, the goal everywhere is to overcome cold-war isolation so that Communist-led unions can be full members of the main confederation of unions in each country, thereby, he says, strengthening the trade-union movement.

Significantly, though, he points to Portugal as the prime example of where this is working. There, the only confederation authorized by the military rulers is intersindical, the one the Communists run.

Wise buyer tips from Met-Ed

If you think you need an air conditioner, here are some ideas that could help you keep cool ... and save money, too!

- First decide whether you really need an air conditioner. You may be able to keep your home cool without the expense of an air conditioner by pulling your drapes closed on sunny days; adding some well-placed fans; making sure you have adequate insulation; and waiting until the cooler evening hours to do those heat and moisture producing activities, such as, clothes washing, drying, dish washing and baking.
- If, however, you still think you need one, then here are some helpful ideas on how to buy and use an air conditioner wisely.

- Some air conditioners use more electricity than others, even though they have the same cooling capacity. To make sure you are buying one that will keep your operating costs to a minimum, check out the Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER) of the unit. The EER may be printed on the air conditioner or the manufacturer's literature; if it isn't there, ask your dealer.

The higher the EER number, the better. An EER of at least 7.5 is recommended; 8 or 9 is better yet, and 10 or more is excellent. In fact, an air conditioner with an EER of 10 uses about 40% less electricity to do the same cooling job as one with an EER of 6.

- Be certain the air conditioner is the right size for the cooling job you want it to do. This can be determined by your dealer once he knows certain information, such as the size of the space to be cooled, the number and size of windows and outside doors, and the type of wall and ceiling construction, etc.

For your own estimating purposes, figure 25 BTU's per square foot of floor space.

- After your air conditioner is installed be sure to keep it set at 78°; close your drapes on sunny days; check weather stripping around doors and windows, and most of all be certain your home is insulated properly with at least 6" of insulation in the ceiling. The money you spend on insulation and weather stripping will pay for itself in lower energy bills over the years.

- And while we are on the subject of money, there's something else you should know. The wise use of your air conditioner can be an important factor in helping to minimize the size of any future increases in the cost of electricity.

Try to keep the use of your air conditioner to a minimum during the peak 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. period when the cost of producing electricity is relatively high.

"It will pay to wait until eight!"

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Be patient if you encounter delays and obstacles to your plans, but don't bring them on yourself through vacillation, irresolution. Step forward with confidence.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Your innate artistry and gift for projecting the unusual that has intrinsic value stand out as winners here. Others can profit by your exceptional know-how.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Mercury influences now stimulate your imagination, give your ideas for making the most of presently latent possibilities for future gains.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Someone may advance a get-rich-quick scheme. Size him up thoroughly before you even listen. A "sensational" gain now could prove costly later.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — It would be wise to keep plans flexible now. Certain changes of circumstance may call for sudden improvisation.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Chance could very well step in and unexpectedly hand you, on the proverbial silver platter, what all your striving couldn't attain. A fine day!

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Something you hear may cause you to suspect a bit of backstage maneuvering, but don't let it lessen your self-confidence. Keep going as you planned and ignore rumors.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Financial matters governed by generous influences. You can now pull off a deal which once seemed hopeless.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — A few "surprises" likely — some which will please, others which may not. Take the bad with the good, in your usual philosophic manner.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Don't be disappointed if a planned trip is called off. It could be for the best. Evening social activities promise to be enlightening.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Don't be too quick to arrive at conclusions and, even after some thought, review again. Misinterpretation of certain situations could prove costly.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Your planets in fine configuration. Seek top-flight investments for your money, time and talents. A rewarding day if you play your cards right.

YOU BORN TODAY are extremely versatile, and expect a great deal of yourself — even more than others expect. You are a perfectionist and, because of this, often drive yourself to the point of fatigue and hypertension. Your tastes are primarily of a literary nature, and you could succeed in any branch of this art, but you would also make a successful lawyer, financier, musician or dramatic entertainer.

Opening lead — ten of spades.

Guess situations may perplex, confound and bewilder players from time to time, but if you know anyone who guesses right a high percentage of the time, rest assured that it's not just luck. The chances are that the guy knows what he's doing.

Take this case where West leads a spade. South wins with the jack, draws two rounds of trumps, cashes two more spades, and exits with a heart to force the opponents to lead diamonds.

Let's say East wins the first heart with the ten and the second one with the king. He must return a diamond, for otherwise declarer gets a ruff and discard and makes the hand.

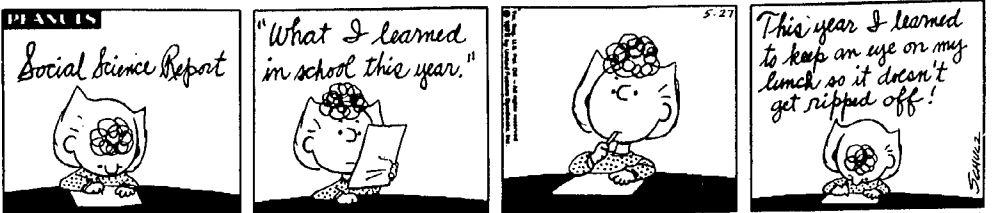

South now has a crucial decision to make on the low diamond return. He must guess whether to play the ten or the queen. If he guesses right, he makes the contract; if he guesses wrong, he goes down.

If declarer thinks East has the jack and West the king, he plays the ten. If he thinks East has the king and West the jack, he plays the queen. (If either defender has both honors, declarer's play does not matter.)

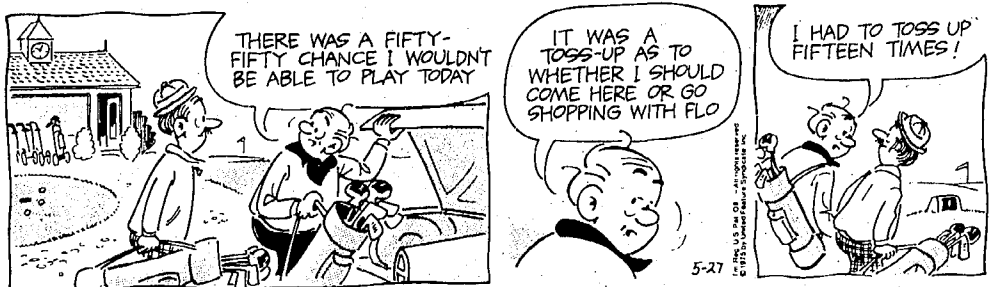

South is not faced with a really difficult guess if he is on the ball. He should play the ten.

Playing the ten is simply a matter of logic. Declarer assumes that if East had the king of diamonds, the defenders would have arranged for West to win the second round of hearts and lead a diamond.

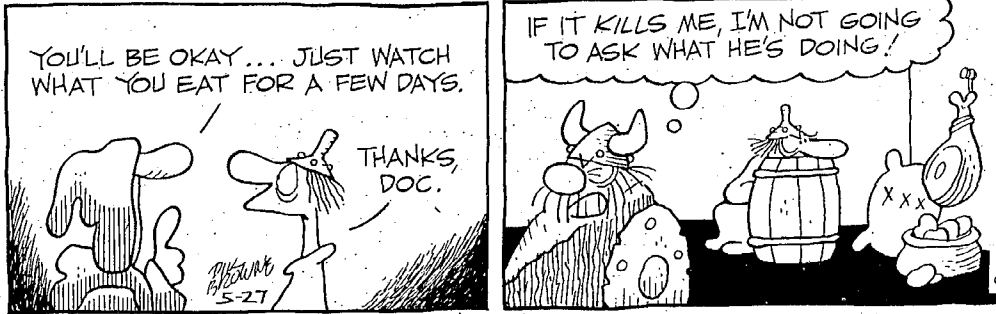

Since they failed to do so, it follows that West must have the king. Once declarer reaches this stage in his reasoning, he cannot gain by playing the queen. He plays the ten and hopes for the best.

Medical researchers aim at polyunsaturated cows

By JOAN LIEMAN
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
DAVIS, Calif. — A polyunsaturated cow? Though it sounds like an idea whose time might never come, the prospect of just such a creature is causing great excitement among medical researchers at the University of California here.

In fact, they've already created such an animal experimentally, and they claim that the feed grain that makes it all possible could prove that the way to a man's heart is through a cow's stomach.

The whole idea is to reduce people's serum cholesterol, a fatty substance that can build up on the walls of arteries. A high level of saturated fats — those coming from meat and dairy products are the prime villains — can boost levels of cholesterol in the blood.

The American Heart Association lists high serum-cholesterol levels as one of several key factors that contribute to the risk of heart disease. (Some experts, however, contend that the line between high cholesterol levels and heart disease is unproven).

For years, the dairy industry has skimmed the butterfat off cow's milk to produce low-fat foods such as skim milk and cottage cheese.

But scientists here claim they have taken a giant step forward: They are testing a feed grain that delays the cow's digestive process, bypassing the stomach that normally turns grain to saturated fats. Thus, the cow yields milk (or meat, in the case of a steer) that is low in saturated fats.

Cardiologists at the medical school here fed the milk and meat to student volunteers and found that their serum-cholesterol levels were significantly lowered by the diet. The students were free to eat steak, butter, ice cream and cheese from the special cows — all foods that are traditionally limited for people who worry about high cholesterol levels.

Doctors here are optimistic about the findings, although they readily admit that it is a long way from a research project to a commercial product in the supermarket.

"Until now, it has been hard to reduce cholesterol through diet alone, because people were unwilling to give up beef, and if you took away someone's ice cream, you were a bad guy," says Dr. Antone Salet, the cardiologist who heads the UC-Davis Lipids Clinic.

The feed grain tested here was developed by Alta Lipids Ltd., a tiny, closely held firm in Boise, Idaho. Its president, Robert M. Rawlings, boasts of "a $100 million company before long," if U.S. Food and Drug Administration approval to market the feed is obtained.

Some sources in the major feed companies are more skeptical, though none debunks the Davis findings. One source questions whether Alta Lipids will be able to process the feed cheaply enough to make it a commercially viable product. Others wonder whether American palates will accept the slightly different flavor of meat and milk products. And a scientist for one major feed maker says he is withholding judgement until he sees scientific data on the human clinical tests in a scientific journal. (The Davis scientists say they have submitted an article to the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, and they note that similar data from a preliminary Australian study has appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine.)

The Davis study, which was sponsored by Alta Lipids, was a coordinated university effort in which various campus departments raised cows, produced and tested foods for taste and quality and monitored the student volunteers.

Dr. Robert E. Hodges, the principal investigator, concluded that students who ate the polyunsaturated products from the test cows experienced a 14 per cent lower serum-cholesterol level than a control group of students fed the same foods from normal cows.

When to reduce salt intake

When is it necessary to reduce the amount of salt in the diet?

Mr. J.M., Wash.

Dear Mr. M.:

In some forms of heart disease, high blood pressure and kidney disorders a low salt, or low sodium, diet is suggested. Salt is sodium chloride. It is the sodium factor that has a tendency to retain fluid in the body.

Many people who are on a salt-free diet may overlook the fact that baking soda, carbonated drinks, some laxatives and many processed foods contain sodium. Consequently, their attempts to limit their salt intake can be cancelled out by these hidden sources of salt.

I am intrigued by the term "multi-phasic" medical examination. Have I been short-changed on my "complete physicals?"

Mrs. R.Y., Tex.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

A "multi-phasic" medical examination is not very different from the excellent routine physical examination you undoubtedly have had.

Complete study of the chemistry of the blood, urinalysis, electrocardiogram and X-rays are all part of such a study. Computerized techniques may be incorporated.

Yet people must remember that it is the discerning judgment of the physician that avoids indiscriminate testing which looks impressive on a final report, but may not be entirely necessary.

Doctors usually order only those examinations which they feel can contribute to the diagnosis and subsequent treatment of the patient.

Can calcium deposits in the shoulder be removed without surgery?

Mr. H.B., Ga.

Dear Mr. B.:

Calcium deposits in the fluid of the bursa, or sac, of the shoulder joint are the result of some inflammation or irritation.

Bursitis is a very painful inflammation which often is associated with calcium deposits. Uric acid (which is not as readily recognized by X-rays) also can cause painful motion of the shoulder.

Not all calcium deposits demand surgery. Sometimes calcium can be broken up by injections of the anesthetic, procaine, and with cortisone.

With rest and treatment the calcium is usually absorbed.

Another cause of lung cancer?

By BARRY KRAMER
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
HARVARD UNIVERSITY scientists reported that animal experiments indicate minute amounts of naturally occurring radioactive substances in tobacco might play a role in causing lung cancer in smokers.

What's more, the scientists said that when animals were exposed both to radioactivity and to cancer-causing chemicals found in tobacco smoke, the incidence of lung tumors far exceeded the incidence that might be expected from exposure to either substance alone.

It's been known for some time that almost immeasurably small amounts of radioactive polonium, a decay product of uranium, are in all plant and animal tissue. In high doses, the Alpha and Beta rays emitted by decaying radioactive materials are known to cause malignancies in humans. But the amount of radioactive polonium in tobacco is so small that it's generally been considered harmless.

However, three researchers at the Harvard University School of Public Health in Boston report that they have been able to induce lung tumors in a significant percentage of hamsters by exposing the lungs of the animals to radioactive plutonium at very low doses consistent with what a human smoker would experience over many years.

In fact, some of the hamsters that developed lung malignancies were exposed to polonium levels one-fifth the amount inhaled by a two-pack-a-day smoker over 25 years, they said.

"These results tend to support the hypothesis that (Radioactive polonium) in cigarette smoke may be a significant factor in the initiation of Lung cancer in smokers," said the Harvard scientists, Dr. John B. Little, Ann R. Kennedy, and Dr. Robert B. McGandy in the latest edition of Science Magazine, a publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Little said in an interview that if the dangers of radioactive polonium in tobacco are verified by other researchers, it would be a simple matter to filter the material out of tobacco smoke. "You could design filters to take out the particles," he said. "Many of the new (cigarette) filters are already doing that."

Ann Landers

VD tests

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this in the interest of the health of your millions of readers.

I am not a tramp. I'm a woman in my mid-20s, respectable, decent. I hold an excellent job, and have had sexual relations with three men in the past two years. Last week one of my friends with whom I slept several days ago phoned to tell me he just learned he had VD and urged me to get tested immediately. I thanked him, went at once to the emergency room of a nearby hospital and sure enough, I had it.

The same evening I phoned another friend with whom I'd been intimate and told him to get tested. He was outraged and shocked that I should even consider the possibility that HE might have a social disease. He said he had no intention of getting tested nor would he inform the four or five girls with whom he was currently sleeping.

I am angered that a person would have so little concern for himself and others. I am angered that my well-paid gynecologist never gives a VD test unless a patient requests it. I am angered by parents and teachers who refuse to discuss VD with their children.

I am grateful that someone told me I had been exposed. I am grateful to the people in the emergency room where I was tested and treated. They made no moral judgments but urged me to inform any friend who might also be infected. I am grateful for places like Planned Parenthood, where VD tests are made on every woman who comes in for an exam. I am grateful I had someone to help me over the bad moments and assure me I am basically the same person I was before I got a disease so many people joke about, but never think could happen to them.

Thanks for letting me sound off. —

Older And Wiser

Dear O. and W.: Thanks for sounding off. I hope you penetrate the crust of some readers who have the same attitude as your friend who was "insulted."

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is 22, very handsome, and could have the pick of the town. Greg informed us last night that he has bought an engagement ring for the girl he plans to marry in August.

We have met her, Ann, and she is very nice. But the girl is handicapped — has only one leg. She doesn't even wear an artificial limb — says she prefers crutches.

I have tried to make Greg see that this girl will be a burden to him throughout life. If anything happens to her other leg she'll be helpless. If they have a family, he will have double responsibilities.

It makes me sick when I think of all the beautiful, healthy girls my son could have picked. Please, Ann, say something to help him see the light. —

Mom

Dear Mom: He sees the light. YOU'RE the one who is stumbling around in the darkness. You should be pleased and proud of your son's mature judgment. Many young men would not have chosen this girl because of her physical handicap. Greg was able to base his choice on qualities far more important and durable than appearance or inconvenience. Please give him my heartiest congratulations.

Wyckoff's Wyckoff Shopper

Why is it that Memorial Day always signals the beginning of summer, altho officially it will not begin until a few weeks hence? Maybe it's because the sun beckons to us... the pools glisten freshly, the golf course is so lush they look unreal... and the tennis courts entice you to try your skill at smashing that ball over the net!

Regardless... the temptation is irresistible, and Wyckoff's fashions for the sun, the sea... the pool... the patio... the tennis court and the golf courses have never been more appealing! Before you "take the plunge," visit our "fashion floor"... "on two"... and see for yourself the magnificent selection of swimwear! You name the "brand name"... and Wyckoff's have got it!!! In the Sportswear department Roxanne and Peter Pan; and Jantzen, Cole of California, Rose Marie Reid and Maidenform not only go into swimwear, but have designed THE most becoming "coverups." The swimwear is "smashing" in every color of the rainbow... and then some... all "bra-sized" which makes the fit perfect every time! Something else I find rather special... Wyckoff's HAVE YOUR SIZE... MISSES 8 to 20... WOMEN'S 38 to 48! We've got it all... from "The String"... to the bikini to the gorgeous one piece bathing suits. The On Two Shop has junior sizes 5 to 13 in swimwear by High Tide, Dippers of California and Beach mates.

Tennis anyone? Join the ever-swelling ranks of the "court-seekers" in White Stag tennis separates in our sportswear department, and don't forget the NEW DANSKIN TENNIS SEPARATES that have just been featured in Harper's Bazaar in our accessory "corner" which adjoins the hosiery department. I think the golfers will find these Danskin separates "just right" for the golf course, too. The wrap skirts... with attached panties, and matching tee shirts are so attractive in combinations of pink or yellow with white and navy and white. Lord and Taylor ran a full page ad on these a few weeks ago... and doesn't that prove all over again that Wyckoff's are way ahead when it comes to knowing what we girls REALLY want to wear. Don't forget, the hosiery department is also headquarters for gloves, and where you will find the fabulous ARIS GOLF GLOVE FOR MEN AND WOMEN. They keep you hands soft and supple and massages them gently all the while you're breaking par. Emmy Award Winner Barbara Walters does the "spot" for them on the Today Show and they ARE GREAT!!!

Yep... the best way to be ready for the 'Good old summertime' is to visit Wyckoff's... the "winner" in the summertime fashion sweepstakes that will place YOU in the sun in style!!!!
